$50 Basic Pay Assured For Army And Navy

Senate Bows, Accepts House Minimum; Representatives Pass Dependent Aid Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Minimum pay of $50 a month was assured enlisted men in all branches of the armed forces as the Senate capitulated to House demands yesterday after weeks of conference bickering.

By a vote of 58 to 20, the Senate rejected a $46 Administration compromise and returned the pay bill to conference with instructions to accept the House figure.

Financial aid for dependents of men in the armed services meanwhile moved closer to enactment as the House followed the Senate's lead in passing compulsory pay allotment and family allowances bill.

$22 Deduction Accepted

The House amended its bill to conform with the Senate's compulsory deduction of $22 a month from military pay toward support of dependent wives and children. The Government would provide another $28 for the wife, $12 for the first child and $10 for each additional dependent child.

Enlisted men were given the option of making a pay allotment for so-called Class B dependents. If an allotment is made the Government would provide an additional $15 for one dependent parent, $25 for two dependent parents, and $5 for each disabled and dependent brother or sister.

Further Action Routine

Where monthly allowances are made to both Class A and Class B dependents, another $5 would be deducted from a service man's pay, or a total of $27 in such cases.

The family aid bill, clearing the way for Selective Service officials to induct some men with dependents, passed the House viva voce as the long-standing military pay dispute reached its climax in the Senate.

The dependents' aid measure affects only line sergeants down to buck privates, and corresponding grades in the other services, while increases in the pay bill extend downward from second lieutenants and ensigns.

Basic pay of $50 for enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard was assured when the Senate adopted a motion to recommit by Senator LaFollette (Progressive) of Wisconsin. The conference finale will come this morning, when conferees of both Houses ratify the increase as a matter of routine.

The La Follette motion also directed the conference group to raise the base pay of the second lowest ranks in all branches to $54. The

WPB Official Tells How to Aid Food Conservation

Five ways in which American consumers can help the War Production Board in insuring this Nation an adequate wartime supply of nourishing food were outlined yesterday by Joseph L. Weiner, deputy director of WPB's civilian supply division. They are:

"First—don't hoard. Don't overbuy. This is what the enemy wants people to do.

"Second—don't waste food.

"Third—eat fresh fruits and vegetables as much as possible, so as to diminish the tin requirements for tin cans.

"Fourth—try to get locally grown vegetables, so as to diminish the requirements for food transportation.

"Fifth—eat substitutes for fish and pork. There are plenty available."

Facts on Gas Are Promised By Roosevelt

President Roosevelt will give the Nation the facts of the rubber and gasoline rationing problems, probably in a fireside chat, he indicated yesterday to a House committee, as soon as he has completed a study of the situation and assembled the data.

Headed by Representative Kleberg (Democrat) of Texas, the committee was organized by an informal meeting of legislators opposed to national gasoline rationing until the reasons for it were fully developed and presented to Congress.

The Texas member was accompanied to the White House by Representatives Lea (Democrat) of California and Holmes (Republican) of Massachusetts, who called upon the President to make known the committee's position, which Kleberg said was supported by 250 House members.

Following the meeting, Representative Kleberg said:

"We had a wonderful conference with the President, and we discussed the rubber situation, we discussed the gas situation, and the President told us he was at present engaged in making as intensive a

Senate Votes $56,336,981 For District

Adds $199,810 to Sum Approved by House; Hospital Gets $139,920

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday approved an appropriation of $56,336,981 for the District of Columbia for 1943, adding $199,810 to the amount voted by the House.

In amendments offered on the floor, $2000 was voted for repairs to the Brookland School at Tenth and Monroe Streets Northeast, $11,500 for repairs to Columbia Hospital and $1200 to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic. Chief among the other increases, reported by the subcommittee on D. C. appropriations last week, was $139,920 for the rehabilitation and operation of the old tuberculosis hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur Streets Northwest.

The House is expected to concur in the amendments.

A rider amendment proposed by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee, would permit congressional investigating committees to obtain the services of Federal employes paid out of department funds.

This proposal, approved on the floor—but also subject to House concurrence—would have the effect of reversing the opinion of Comptroller General Lindsay Warren that Federal personnel employed by committees should be compensated from legislative funds rather than from money appropriated for departmental duties.

Amount of the District appropriations, with the Senate additions, still is more than $500,000 under regular and supplemental estimates for 1943. Some of the estimates were disallowed because they were for construction projects made impossible by war and priorities.

The new recreation department came through with a first appropriation of $391,394, but most of this was a switch in funds from the old Community Center Department which operated under the Board of Education.

39½ Billions More Sought For Army

11Billions for Planes; President's Request Is Six Times Greater Than First Estimate

By L. W. Meredith
International News Service Staff Writer

President Roosevelt called on Congress yesterday to give the Army $39,417,827,337 more to provide that branch of the armed service with men and material to carry the war on the enemy on an ever-increasing scale.

The request sends to more than 200 billion dollars the Nation's projected war expenditures.

Emphasizing the importance of airplanes, which were given great credit by Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, and Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander of the Pacific Fleet, in the repulse of the Japanese at Midway Island, the President specified that $11,043,000,000 of the huge Army fund should be set aside for the Air Corps.

His budget request gave no indication or explanation of how the Air Corps fund would be spent, or the number or types of planes it would provide—a question of military secrecy which will be disclosed only to members of House and Senate Appropriations Committees in closed sessions.

Original Estimate Far Short

The fund, which is more than six times the amount originally estimated by the President in his January budget estimates for the Army—$6,338,001,747—is required by changing war circumstance, the President said.

In a letter accompanying the request, the Chief Executive stated:

"Under the change in conditions which has since come about, such estimates fall far short of reflecting the estimated needs of the military establishment for 1943, and their complete revision becomes necessary."

The request is for military activities of the War Department alone. For the vast civilian enterprises of the department—flood control, rivers and harbors, and other engineering activities—separate funds are provided in measures already before Congress.

12.7 Billions for Lend-Lease

The new estimate includes $9,943,920,000 for guns and ammunition; $4,127,000,000 for Army pay; $6,954,882,000 for quartermaster and transportation costs; $2,505,730,000 for the Signal Corps; $2,923,548,000 for the Engineering Corps; $617,510,000 for

New German Drive in Libya Smashed by British Artillery

By the Associated Press

Cairo, June 8.—Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's main armored column was reported today to have been halted by devastating artillery fire in a new assault on the British Libyan stronghold at Knightsbridge.

This was the second time in two days that Rommel had attempted to break through toward Tobruk, 15 miles to the northeast. He threw in strong infantry forces followed by tanks, but the British artillery fire broke up the drive before it gained any ground.

The tank column was forced to retire before it got within range of the Allied forces. Axis forces had previously failed in violent attacks on Knightsbridge both Saturday and Sunday.

Meanwhile, Free French forces repulsed another German attack at Bir Hacheim, where German-Italian columns have been trying to break through for the past five days.

The Free French, who are supported by Indian troops, were said to have had their munitions supply replenished, making their position appear secure for the moment.

German supply columns moving northeast from the gap in the British mine field near Ain El Gazala have been constantly under attack by Allied mechanized columns and R. A. F. bomber and fighter squadrons.

Scattered tank skirmishes were reported between German concentrations near Knightsbridge and the Ain El Gazala line.

Rommel's forces, however, were said by military quarters to have received reinforcements through the gap in the mine field despite the heavy British pounding.

The British were believed to be sparring for a knockout blow at Axis troops west of Knightsbridge. Informed sources pointed out that Lieut. Gen. Neil M. Ritchie's strategy seemed to be to compress the Germans into a semicircle with the mine field gap at their backs, then to pounce on them with all his strength and at the same time cut their supply line at the rear.

The German position was likened to a tadpole with its head pointing toward Knightsbridge and its tail wriggling back through the mine-field gap. The British declared yesterday's actions dented the head.

Sevastopol Continues to Hurl Foe Back

Germans Suffer Heavy Losses in 4th Day Of Attack, Reds Claim

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Tuesday), June 9.—Soviet troops have beaten off continuing Nazi attacks on Sevastopol for the fourth straight day and inflicted heavy losses on the Germans, the Russians announced early today.

Garrisoned by some of the toughest veterans of the Red Army and navy, the Crimean seaport has held against recurring Nazi assaults for seven months despite the Germans' seizure of the remainder of the peninsula.

The midnight communique said: "In the Sevastopol sector stubborn fighting continues. Our troops are successfully repulsing enemy attacks, and inflicting heavy losses."

Reds Force River Crossing

No essential changes occurred elsewhere in Russia, but a supplementary communique said Red troops had forced a river crossing in the Kalinin sector northwest of Moscow and driven the Germans out of two populated places.

The Red air force also destroyed or damaged 50 German trucks with troops and supplies, sank three enemy patrol ships and one cutter and damaged another patrol ship and a transport vessel during Sunday's operations, this communique said.

"Heavy Blow" to Germans

(The Moscow correspondents of the British Broadcasting Co. said that the Nazis held the air advantage on the Sevastopol front because of limited airfield facilities in the besieged area held by the Russians.

But, he said in a relayed report heard by Columbia Broadcasting System in New York, that the Russians had a big reservoir of food and munitions cached underground and that if the German attack continues "it will cost the Germans an enormous price."

Huge Formations

By the Associated Press

London, June 8.—United States-built Boston bombers took over today's R. A. F. assault on the occupied continental coast, concentrating on the Belgian canal city of Bruges in the heaviest of daylight raids in which hundreds of planes participated.

The air ministry announced that six escorting fighters were lost. Pilots of two R. A. F. planes were saved.

Two pilots of the second American Eagle Squadron—Flight Lieut. John J. Mooney, 22, of Long Island City, N. Y., and Pilot Officer Jackson Barrett Mahon, 21, of Santa Barbara, Calif.—accounted for three of the four German planes shot down today.

The Americans got their planes in fighting over the St. Omer area.

"We tore into them firing as we went and I saw my first victim explode in the air," Mooney said. "I fired at a second which caught fire though I hadn't time to see where he crashed."

Mahon brought down the other plane.

Huge formations of Bostons convoyed by droves of fighters swarmed over the coast in relays, some flying at 20,000 feet and visible only now and then through breaks in cloud formations. At one point on the Kent coast it took one mammoth relay a half hour to pass over.

With the R. A. F. offensive going full blast around the clock, it was announced that 86 German planes were bagged by British fighters in

BULLETIN

Pearl Harbor, June 8 (INS).—Pacific Fleet headquarters announced today "there is nothing to report from the Central Pacific area."

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

America's armed forces in the Pacific—jubilant over their major victory at Midway Island—were on the alert last night for further attacks by another Japanese naval force still intact and operating in the North Pacific.

Army and Navy bombers and reconnaissance planes were still hunting for damaged enemy warships heading for the security of Jap bases in the Marshall Islands, but the Battle of Midway was believed to be ended, at least for the present.

Far to the north, however, a blanket of heavy weather kept secret the movements of the other enemy task force whose planes bombed Dutch Harbor last week.

Hit by Patrol Planes

Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, declared Sunday night that "a series of battle maneuvers" is continuing in Alaskan waters between this force and our naval and air units. What was going on, he said, was obscured by weather and lack of reports.

This was widely interpreted as meaning that the forces were locked in battle off the Aleutians. Officials here said yesterday, however, that apparently there has been no direct contact in the north for two or three days. By "battle maneuvers," King apparently meant that both sides were seeking the other through the fog-bound region.

With Japan doubly anxious to regain "face" after the humiliating defeat at Midway, the northern force probably will strike as soon as the weather permits, officials here believe.

No Fleet Action

Where they will hit or where they are now is not known to the high command here. Our Alaskan bases have not been heard from, undoubtedly because they are maintaining radio silence. Messages to Washington might enable bombers from the Japanese carrier or carriers in the force to ride in on the radio beam and find the bases in the fog.

As far as is known here, the Japanese and American forces in

Texan Lost Plane and Comrades Attacking Foe, but Had 'Fish-Eye' View of an Epic Fight; Watched Enemy Planes Vainly Seek Haven

By Walter B. Clausen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Pearl Harbor, June 8.—The first eyewitness account of the Battle of Midway Island, detailing its most violent stages, was related today by a wounded American naval aviator who told of floating in the sea and watching a line of burning Japanese ships pass by.

He told of a thunderous—and highly successful—attack by American dive-bombers and torpedo planes on Japanese aircraft carriers.

And from his "fish-eye" view, he watched the desperate circlings of Japanese naval planes, unable to settle on their blazing and battered mother ships.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, revealed the story of the aviator, Ensign G. H. Gay, 25-year-old torpedo plane pilot, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Gay of Houston, Tex. Gay's wounds were not serious.

Hid Head Under Cushion to Avoid Strafing

For 24 hours the pilot, careful to conceal himself from vengeful Japanese flyers by hiding his head under a cushion from his wrecked plane, drifted in the sea and obtained one of the most amazing eyewitness stories of a major naval engagement in the history of warfare.

Ensign Gay occupied what naval men called "a fish-eye view" of the attack on three Japanese carriers. His squadron met fierce enemy fighter plane opposition while driving home a torpedo assault on one of the larger carriers in the Japanese fleet early on June 4, opening day of the Battle of Midway.

He was the only one of the crew of three to survive the crash of h ship. In the water, he clung to his boat-bag, and covered his head w the cushion.

What happened thereafter is a naval epic.

Taking off from his fleet carrier with his squadron, Gay appr the objective in midmorning. Visibility was unlimited. Below h Japanese carriers, with less than 10 miles between the fleet an the enemy ships, which were screened by a c and destroyers.

Gay took stock of the astounding drama below him. Two Kag carriers had been taking on their aircraft. Another smaller carrie between them, also receiving planes that were fighting the far-Battle of Midway.

One of the larger carriers already burned fiercely, while en cruisers and destroyers wheeled around it waiting to rescue person

In the face of terrific antiaircraft fire and enemy fighter attack, American planes leveled for the assault. Gay heard his machinegunne say he had been hit. But the approach continued. Near the great Japanese carrier, Gay launched his projectile, then swung sharply over the target and sped astern as fast as his plane could carry him.

Coolly, Gay brought his heavy plane into a stall and pancaked into the sea several miles astern of the enemy carrier.

His gunner was dead, and in the emergency landing his radioman was unable to pull free.

Flames and Explosions Sear and Rend Enemy

At 11 a. m., Gay, alone, watched the tail surfaces of his plane disappear. Now a bit of luck held with him. Out of the sinking wreckage floated the bag containing the deflated rubber life-raft—and a black cushion on which the bombardier kneels while working.

Gay figured his chances quickly and accurately. There had been reports of Japanese strafing helpless pilots bailing out by parachute, and of machinegunning men in such life-rafts as had floated clear of his own plane.

Gay declined to offer himself as such a victim. He ducked under the cushion as enemy fighters swarmed overhead. Not knowing the extent of his wounds, he felt cautiously at his arm. The bullet, which apparently had struck him at the spent end of its trajectory, dropped out in his hand.

"For some reason," Gay recalled, "I put it in my mouth. Maybe I wanted a souvenir. Anyhow, I lost it before long."

He bandaged his injured leg under water.

Twenty minutes later American dive-bombers rocketed into view.

Then from his fish-eye view at sea level, Gay saw two other Jap carriers hit squarely by United States bombs.

Tremendous fires burst from these vessels. Great billows of smoke churned upward with flames flaring from the dark columns.

Internal explosions sent new gushes of smoke and fire belching from the carriers at momentary intervals, he said.

As the ferocious attack ended, the second Kaga class carrier was on fire from bow to stern.

Surface craft gave Gay some narrow brushes. One enemy destroyer appeared to be driving straight at him as she sped to aid a stricken carrier. He thought it would run him down, but at the last instant it swirled past him harmlessly.

A heavy cruiser steamed by less than 500 yards from him. Gay saw her crew lining the rail, their white uniforms gleaming against the battle-paint, grimly watching the destruction of their force.

Watched Planes Hover Over Ruined Nest

As the afternoon waned, the Japanese made frantic efforts to stem the damage. An enemy cruiser sought to stand alongside a crippled carrier, but seemed unable to approach close enough. Gay observed this vessel's big guns commence to rake the wounded carrier, presumably to scuttle her. The crew was still aboard but the cruiser's commander apparently was willing to sacrifice them.

Sometime later a destroyer managed to come alongside the still floating carrier to remove survivors. Overhead, Gay said, Japanese planes appeared to be circling in a vain attempt to land on the smashed carrier. They would pass above her, then soar out of sight, and return.

Darkness fell, and he never learned what became of them.

In the twilight, "maybe a little earlier than was wise," Gay inflated his life raft from his carbondioxide bottle. He said he had his fill of salt water.

Working calmly, the young pilot had to make emergency patches on several bullets holes in the rubber boat before it would sustain him

British Ask French To Evacuate Coast

Radio Plainly Hints That Allied Thrust Is Sure to Come

By the Associated Press

London, June 8.—Britain urged the people of France today to evacuate the coastal areas from the Belgian frontier to the Pyrenees before those areas are engulfed by coming Allied operations of "capital importance."

The appeal was made in a French language broadcast by the British radio, which gave no indication that any major Allied thrust was imminent, but at the same time plainly implied that one was sure to come.

The Germans were reported by the Daily Sketch to have issued orders forbidding French coastal residents to leave the area, and the newspaper said they planned to hold the civil population as a shield against British operations.

"The coastal regions of occupied France are likely to become more and more a theater of war operations," the British Broadcasting Co. solemnly declared. "For obvious reasons it is not possible to specify in advance either the moment or place of such operations. They will be executed at the most opportune moment and everywhere they will be useful.

"They will inevitably bring with them the gravest dangers for the civil population. Consequently, we urge all Frenchmen in the prohibited zone (the Germans had so defined the entire coastal stretch from the Belgian to the Spanish frontier) to take precautions from now on.

"The only effective precaution is to evacuate in the shortest time the prohibited coastal zones as delimited by the Germans. We do not underestimate the difficulties of such an evacuation nor the obstacles which will be presented.

"If we urge you to overcome them it is because it affects the success of operations of capital importance in the struggle for the liberation of France.

"It has been shown on several occasions that the presence of a civilian population on the scene of active operations hinders the action of the troops, and particularly of friendly troops, in a very grave manner.

"Don't wait until the last moment. It would be too late. Go away at the earliest possible moment. . ."

British sources declined to offer any interpretation of this broadcast, saying simply that it must stand for itself.

Navy's Gain

Army Twice Rejected Ensign Gay

By the Associated Press

Houston, Tex., June 8.—Ensign George H. Gay, jr., of Houston, whose amazing experience in the Midway naval engagement was described by the Navy today, is a perfect example of what a grimly determined lad will do when he wants to become an aviator.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Gay, sr., tell the story:

Twice young Gay was turned down because examiners said his heart couldn't stand the strain of dive-bombing.

"You have been sitting at a desk too long," they told him, referring to his years at school.

He set about to get himself in shape. He picked the hardest work he could find, becoming a construction gang laborer.

He toiled for six months and reported back to the Army authorities.

They told him he was not in shape.

So back to his job he went and worked another year.

To change his luck at the end of a year he went around to the naval aviation enlistment office.

He passed the physical with flying colors and was sent to Florida for his training.

"He was determined to get into aviation," his father said.

"That was all he thought about all his life.

"Even when he was so small his fingers just got around a pocketknife, he began making model airplanes.

Hitler Knows Defeat Nears, Halifax Says

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., June 8.—"I feel pretty sure that Hitler himself knows that he cannot now win the war, and certainly that he can't win it unless he wins this year," Lord Halifax declared today.

The British Ambassador to the United States pointed to the Allies' "real and crushing" air superiority, the Russian campaign, and progress in combatting enemy U-boats as grounds for United Nations' confidence and "misgivings in the Axis camp."

The war has demonstrated air superiority to be "the precondition of a large scale action on land and at sea," he asserted in a prepared address at Syracuse University's seventy-first commencement exercises. He added:

"Lubeck, Rostock, Cologne, Essen and Tokyo are the first real doses of a pretty potent medicine that we have long been brewing for Hitler, Hirohito and other members of the gang."

U-Boat Being Defeated

Better methods of defense and attack against undersea raiders in the Atlantic can be anticipated, and the shipyards of both nations are hard at work turning out new vessels, the Ambassador said.

New methods of spotting and destroying submarines are being perfected, Halifax said, and the growing superiority of United Nations in aircraft will aid the campaign.

Discussing increasing strength of the United Nations, Lord Halifax apparently was taking notice of demands here and abroad for the opening of a second European front against Germany when he called upon the public to "give credit for reasonable intelligence to our general staffs."

"We cannot be told all their secrets, and if they sometimes seem to overlook the obvious, there are always two possible explanations," he said.

Can't Comfort Enemy

"Either they are in fact preparing to do the very thing that you and I think they ought to do; or else, as has so often happened on our side during the war, they have not the necessary means to do everything that they would like. But they cannot comfort the Axis by publicly saying so. It is often just as valuable to the enemy to know what we are not going to do, as what we are."

In preparing offensive blows, Lord Halifax asserted, the Axis can command "absolute secrecy of action," whereas in the United States and Britain, the prevailing trends of thought among national leaders are free for all to learn, including the Axis nations.

Services to Get $50 Base Pay

Senate originally asked $42 minimum for the lowest rank and $48 for the next highest grade. Conferees had compromised on $46 and $52, respectively, for the two lowest enlisted ranks in all branches.

Present base pay of enlisted men, and the new rates, which would be retroactive to the first of this month, are as follows:

Grade	Present base pay	Proposed base pay
Master sergeant; chief petty officer	$126	$138
Acting chief petty officer, Navy and Coast Guard only	99	126
First or technical sergeant; petty officer, first class	84	114
Staff sergeant; petty officer, second class	72	96
Sergeant; petty officer, third class	60	78
Corporal; seaman, first class	54	66
Private, first class; seaman, second class	36	54
Private; apprentice seaman	30	50

The present seventh grade (men with less than four months' service, new paid only $21 a month), would be eliminated and inductees would start at $50.

Pay of commissioned officers was continued as at present, except for the lowest pay brackets, Army second lieutenants and Navy ensigns, whose pay would be increased from $1500 to $1800 a year. All commissioned officers would receive more liberal living allowances.

With $4 more a month than conferees recommended, LaFollette said buck privates could buy two packs of cigarettes a day, or $6000 of insurance. He said soldiers now have to count their pennies so closely that the cost of smokes is a major item and many are unable to pay the price of a trip home during a furlough.

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, defended the conference compromise. Austin pointed out that in addition to provision for longevity pay increases, the bill raised the pay 20 per cent for service outside continental United States. As a prize for marksmanship, he said soldiers could receive up to $5 additional pay monthly. Austin argued that under the compromise it would be possible for Army buck privates sent overseas to draw $60.20 a month.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley also presented a plea for the conference figure as a "fair compromise" but the Senate on a roll call followed La Follette.

While the increased pay scales would be effective from the first of this month, financial aid for families of service men would not become operative until the second calendar month following enactment, as the bill passed the House.

Rejected by the House was a provision of the Senate bill authorizing the Selective Service to work out a system of priorities for calling men with dependents after the 1-A lists are exhausted.

New York, June 8.—Vice President Wallace envisioned America today as "chosen of the Lord" for transformation "into something which Europe and Africa and Asia will welcome as their brightest hope in the time to come."

In a speech prepared for a dinner meeting sponsored by The Churchman to honor President Roosevelt, the Vice President asserted that history thus far "seems but a prelude to a magnificent world symphony."

"America," he added, "will not have made her contribution until 9 out of 10 of the adults of the world can read and write, until all the children of the world can have at least a pint of milk a day, until education brings with it such a sense of responsibility that all of the people of the world can be trusted to take part in democratic government."

Wallace termed America "the heir of the religious concepts of Palestine and the culture of Rome and England." It is building, he said, for "a peace which is not based on imperialistic intervention."

Must Bring Freedom Everywhere

"The American peace, the peace of the common man," he declared, "must be translated into freedom everywhere.

"And if America is a chosen land, it is not for her sake that she is chosen of the Lord at a certain stage of the world's history, but for the sake of all the world.

"We appreciate all that has come to us out of the past, but we insist that it be transformed into a greater hope for the future, into something which Europe and Africa and Asia will welcome as the brightest hope in the time to come."

The Rev. Frank R. Wilson, rector of Mr. Roosevelt's Hyde Park parish, accepted for the President The Churchman's 1942 award, a plaque given annually to the person deemed to have done most "for the promotion of good will and better understanding among all peoples."

In a letter of acceptance read by Wilson, the President asserted that while the road ahead was "dark and perilous," the United Nations were determined "to establish a new age of freedom on this earth."

"And with the united help of all free men and of all the great institutions of freedom, of which the churches of the free stand first, we shall create a new world in which there is freedom of worship and utterance, freedom from want and from fear, for all peoples everywhere in the world."

The presentation was made by Dr. Guy Emery Shipler, editor of the Churchman, a religious publication.

Dr. Luis Quintanilla, Minister-Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, told the gathering that the example of the United States in spontaneously forgoing the advantages of its material might to adopt a policy of "respect of the territorial, political and economic integrity" of 20 neighbor states "finds no parallel in history."

"The 'good neighbor policy' has won the United States the cooperation of an entire hemisphere," Dr. Quintanilla said.

Lieut. Vandevanter Of Washington Among 15 Aiding Bond Drive

By the Associated Press

New York, June 8.—Fifteen war heroes drank the toast of Broadway today but before their glasses were drained they were clamoring for return to the world's battle fronts.

Broadway gave the 15 fighting men its own peculiar brand of bombardment—a ticker tape barrage reminiscent of former parades up the famous lower Manhattan canyon.

The honored men were heroes all; men from Pearl Harbor and Corregidor and the Java Sea, men who had bombed Germany, British commandos and men who had sustained the worst the enemy could offer in Libya.

The Americans included: Lieut. Eliot Vandevanter, jr., of Washington, D. C., who received the Distinguished Flying Cross at the recommendation of Gen. Douglas MacArthur for a raid on the Japs at Luzon.

From the Battery, where they were greeted by a crowd of about 5000, they rode the traditional heroes' ride up Broadway to City Hall for an official greeting by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia.

As part of the program—the first in a series of Nation-wide celebrations sponsored by the Treasury Department for its war bond campaign—the boys paraded a second time, sweeping up Seventh Avenue to the Father Duffy statue in the Times Square area.

New Yorkers were lined 10 and 15 deep at places and the windows of skyscrapers were jammed with paper-throwing spectators.

After the parading and fanfare Sergt. R. George Herbert of the British commandos summed up the feeling of the 15 with this comment:

"I'd rather go into action any time than do it again. It made me all goose-flesh."

On a previous occasion Sergeant Herbert did better in a crowd. That time he captured single-handed 17 Germans in a raid on Vaagso, Norway. A good commando, he said, "must be a man with belly—with guts."

Lieut. George S. Welch, 23, of Wilmington, Del., who shot down 4 of 12 Jap planes at Pearl Harbor, said:

"I'll like to get back into action as soon as possible. But not back to Honolulu. It's too dull there now. I want to go some place where there's some action."

"What I remember mostly," he added, "is being so damn mad, seeing Jap planes bomb our field. For a few minutes we stood there in the Officers Club, just being mad, until we realized we had other planes at a nearby field. We ran to cars, got into planes and took off."

Ensign Donald F. Mason, 28-year-old Rochester (Minn.) naval flier who sent the famous "Sighted sub—sank same" message, said the New York reception has "left me speechless."

Foe Suffering Heavy Losses At Chuhsien

BULLETIN

New York, June 8 (INS).—The City of Chuhsien has fallen to the Japanese, the British radio said tonight, quoting a Chungking dispatch. The broadcast was picked up by C. B. S.

By the Associated Press

Chungking, June 8.—The Chinese reported tonight that their troops were inflicting heavy casualties on the Japanese in ferocious fighting on the outskirts of Chuhsien, rail center in western Chekiang Province which the invader penetrated during a weekend assault.

Japanese capture of the town's airport—apparently one of their main objectives since it is within bombing range of Tokyo—and part of the walled town itself was acknowledged yesterday, and today's communique indicated the enemy had broadened his control to all but outlying sections.

(Tokyo claimed capture of Chuhsien Saturday. Dispatches broadcast from Tokyo today said 2817 Chinese had died in defense of the walled town, and listed 3757 prisoners captured there.)

Chinese units battling a Japanese effort to close in upon Chekiang from the west, in neighboring Kiangsi Province, were reported to have recaptured Luhsiyuan and wiped out one enemy force.

On the southern front, the communique said, several hundred casualties were inflicted on reinforced Japanese forces which attempted to drive southward from the recaptured Chinese town of Lunling toward the Burma border.

In the north, the Chinese Central News Agency said Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's troops had recaptured Pantao, town in lower Shansi Province, and seized a quantity of booty, including 100 rifles and 3000 cases of ammunition.

Military authorities here said they were without information of a Tokyo-reported drive by the Japanese in the north from Paotow and Suiyuan. An army spokesman described as "pure speculation" a report that a Japanese thrust there would be aimed at severing China's supply line with Russia.

daylight operations alone in May, bringing the daylight total since the war's start to 4365 enemy craft.

Charged with the task of clearing northern France and the low countries of German air power and so making the R. A. F.'s mighty night bombing offensive all the more effective, the swarms of daylight raiders attacked air bases, channel ports, antiaircraft positions, detector posts and other objectives.

These raids were a continuation of the powerful daytime campaign begun last week in conjunction with the bombing offensive by as many as 1000 fighters and light bombers on some nights. But bad weather on the continent kept the "heavies" from making another of their nightly visits to the Reich.

Conditions were good enough, however, to permit blows in France on freight yards near Caen in Normandy, a train at Montdidier, near Amiens, and an airdrome at Leeuwarden in Holland. Mines also were dropped in German waters.

port said the Germans were hurling clouds of airplanes and waves of infantrymen against the Russians.

At the opposite pole of the battlefront, more than 1000 miles to the north, the Russians reported the only real offensive thrust of the day, an assault by the Leningrad army, which a communique said dealt "a heavy blow" to the Germans.

A single engagement in this fight was said to have cost the Germans more than 500 killed. Four hundred others were reported wiped out on the long contested battlefront west of Kalinin.

(The German high command said the Russian attack was a violent assault upon a strongly defended bridgehead in the Volkhov region south of Leningrad.)

the north have been in contact only once since the raid and reconnaissance flight over Dutch Harbor Wednesday.

It is understood that United States patrol planes located the enemy force two or three days ago, and loosed some bombs on them. Due to the weather, our pilots could not see what damage was done, and could not keep the Jap fleet under observation. This engagement has not been officially announced.

Since then there has been little heard from Alaska, but if there had been any further attacks on our bases they probably would have been reported. The weather has been such that either attacks by the enemy planes or counterattacks by our air forces would be both difficult and risky.

So when the weather lifts the Jap force may send its planes to attack almost anywhere—at Dutch Harbor, or the other Alaskan bases at Kodiak, Anchorage or Sitka—or farther afield. The fleet may have set out for Hawaii or even the West Coast under the cover of the fog.

Our warships in the northern Pacific are undoubtedly hunting for them, but they too would be chary of using their radios.

Undamaged units of the Jap force which attacked Midway might rendezvous with this other fleet and attempt to regain some badly needed prestige for the Mikado's navy.

For there was no question that Japan suffered a major defeat in the battle just ended west of Midway Island.

Cautious Admiral King—cautious in talk not action—would not use the term "Japanese defeat" in discussing the battle with reporters Sunday night, but virtually every other qualified authority proclaimed an out and out victory.

King, patently, was trying to prevent a wave of optimism from sweeping the country which would exaggerate a major Japanese defeat into the smashing of the entire enemy fleet.

But the record speaks for itself. A substantial portion of the Japanese navy, including at least four aircraft carriers, and battleships, cruisers, destroyers and troop-laden transports, set out to smash and capture Midway. The size of the fleet suggests that it may have had other objectives—some of the other mid-Pacific outposts which serve as "listening posts" for attacks on Hawaii.

They ran into a hornet's nest of bombers and torpedo planes. Midway must have been heavily stocked with Army Boeing "flying fortresses," their consolidated counterparts, and North American twin-engined B-25s. A Navy carrier task force was in the vicinity.

When the Japanese planes left the carriers to attack Midway, the enemy found itself in a trap. Marine Corps and probably Army fighters and antiaircraft batteries on the island went after the Nipponese bombers, while our big land-based bombers and carrier torpedo craft and dive-bombers struck at the enemy fleet.

Apparently there were no American surface craft in direct contact with the Japanese force, though one of our carriers was hit by a bomb and a Jap submarine sunk one of our destroyers. Admiral Nimitz reported that most of the men of the destroyer were saved.

That was the extent of our ship loses, while Japan lost two or three carriers and a destroyer, and heavy damage to another one or two carriers, three battleships, four to six cruisers and three transports.

Our long-range bombers followed the retreating enemy fleet as far as they could, harrying the damaged ships, but lost them at night. They probably seek haven at their protected bases in the Marshall Islands.

Observers here, in summarizing the results of the battle, agree that besides the stunning blow struck at Japanese sea power, and the repulse of the enemy in their eastward drive, there is another important though indirect result.

The threat to Australia and India as well as Hawaii, Midway and Alaska, is lessened, they say, because the Japanese navy will not relish too well running into the same caliber of land-based aircraft that punished them off Midway.

Russian Reaction

Moscow, June 8 (AP).—The United States communique on the repulse of the Japanese fleet near Midway was published prominently today by Pravda at the top of the foreign news page in space the Communist Party newspaper recently gave to Britain's 1000 plane bombings of the Reich.

There was no editorial comment on the sea fight or its outcome.

safely. He clambered in. The long night began.

Far to the north, great glowing patches appeared in the sky. Gay thought these might have been the searchlights of Japanese rescue vessels seeking to pick up carrier personnel.

There didn't seem to be much else to do, so he "tried to catch a few winks of sleep."

Toward morning, he was awakened from fitful slumber by three explosions which he believed may have been demolition charges.

Several hours after sunup a Navy patrol plane, winging out on a search, spotted his rubber boat. Later the plane returned and picked up Gay.

When a Navy doctor asked him what treatment he had for his burns he replied: "well, I soaked 'em in salt water for 10 hours."

On the way back to base, Gay saw the surface of the battle-area littered with black Japanese life-rafts, presumably used by the enemy when they abandoned ship. Great patches of oil floated on the debris-strewn sea, Gay said.

Gay reported that the one carrier of the Kaga class could be listed as a "certain loss," while the other two carriers were "probable." These were later pursued by American forces engaged in finishing off the crippled units of the Japanese fleet.

Gay's wounds are not serious.

His father is a Texas oil operator. Gay was graduated from Texas A. & M. College as a civil and mechanical engineer. He took his naval flight training at Jacksonville and Miami, Fla. In the Navy are many Texans, who like Ensign Gay and Admiral Nimitz are tough and full of fight.

[The Navy said it could be assumed the carriers Gay observed were among those mentioned in the official communique on losses in the battle although there is "no definite information thereon." The Japanese losses have been reported as 14 and possibly 18 warships sunk or damaged, three and possibly five of them carriers.

The Kaga class includes two carriers, the Kaga and the Akagi, believed to be Japan's largest. They are vessels of 26,900 tons, 715 feet long and carrying a maximum of 60 planes each. The Kaga was placed in commission in 1921 and the Akagi in 1925. They were built to offset the large United States carriers Saratoga and Lexington, one of which the Japanese claim to have sunk in the battle of the Coral Sea.]

Man Power Policy Committee Set Up

Changes Due

U. S. Faces Coffee, Tea Rationing

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Rationing of coffee, tea and cocoa is "quite likely" and compulsory billeting of war workers may be in sight if available quarters are not thrown open on a sufficiently large scale, Joseph L. Weiner, deputy director of the War Production Board's civilian supply division, declared yesterday in previewing "far-reaching" wartime changes in the lives and habits of "every citizen."

"Living as usual" on the American standard is due for alteration in the next few months, Weiner said in a press conference outline of the pattern of the country's war economy as it may be expected to affect the citizen in his daily use of the four economic essentials—food, clothing, transportation and housing.

While coffee, tea and cocoa—"like rubber" because supplies are dependent upon water-borne transport now at least partially embargoed—are likely to be under direct rationing, "it may be said categorically that there is no danger that this country will lack a sufficient supply of staples, or that the American diet will lack its vital elements," Weiner stated.

He warned, however, that "it is also clear that some of our eating habits may have to be revised." The same problem of transport through submarine packs "comes up in the case of bananas," he stated, while "other things which must be imported may be lacking from our curtomary menus" Weiner recalled that the war has closed down some American fishing areas while the need for feeding the Allies is shortening the supply of pork.

The practice of keeping housing vacant in war areas would be "hard to tolerate," Weiner declared. He added that he believed the construction of privately financed homes for sale should be "discouragd" while priority assistance is concenerated on "these projects that will be made available for rental to war workers."

It will be impossible, he said, to allocate steel and other essential materials for the construction of housing in areas where existing adequate facilities "have not been put to work because of reluctance on someone's part to make them available."

"Compulsory billeting of war workers has been resorted to in England," he recalled. "In that country, unoccupied homes have been commandered. These two methods furnish means of solving housing problems, but I hope they will not have to be adopted here."

Weiner said "it appears now" that there will be no rationing of clothing this year but he declined to make a prediction for 1943. Furthermore, he stated, additional changes in style and materials can be expected. Because of military demands for wool, more cotton will have to be worn and woolen manufacturers will have to blend wool with other yarns.

The country, Weiner declared, will have to "dress for war," but, he promised, United States citizens basically will be "warmly and adequately" garbed.

Because of shortages in transportation facilities Weiner stated that fuel oil would be given carrier priorities over gasoline.

As for pleasure transportation, Weiner said, that will be "highly selective" with the result that the Nation's social life will return to its neighborhoods.

14 Men to Guide Commission in Job Of Mobilizing Labor

A 14-man policy committee to guide the War Man Power Commission in its "fateful" task of mobilizing American labor for maximum war production was set up yesterday by the commission chairman, Paul V. McNutt.

To be comprised of seven national labor leaders and an equal number of representatives of production and transportation management, the committee was established under McNutt's first order as man power chief "to consider and recommend to the chairman matters of major policy concerning the activities and responsibilities of the commission."

The body which was given the title of Man Power Policy Committee and which McNutt said he would consult, along with the Man Power Commission, on all major questions, will hold its first meeting today to discuss basic policies and immediate problems.

Two Unions Represented

The committee, said McNutt, not only will be charged with study of special problems referred to it by the man power head, but will make investigations on its own initiative and will have the authority to formulate man power policies.

Railroad labor and railroad management will have one representative each on the committee, while the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. will be represented by three officials apiece with six war production management executives making up the rest of the committee.

"The Man Power Policy Committee is charged with considering and recommending policies, and also with initiating policies," McNutt said. "Its recommendations will have great weight in determining the fateful steps we shall take."

Members Named

The committee will start work with 11 of its 14 places filled by the following:

Management representatives—R. Conrad Cooper, assistant vice president, Wheeling Steel Corp.; H. A. Enochs, personnel chief, Pennsylvania Railroad; R. E. Gillmor, president, Sperry Gyroscope Co.; R. Randall Irwin, industrial relations director, Lockheed Aircraft Corp.; C. J. Whipple, president, Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co.

Labor representatives—Frank P. Fenton, organization director, American Federation of Labor; John P. Frey, metal trades department, A. F. L.; George Masterson, president, United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters (A. F. L.); Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president of the United Steel Workers of America (C. I. O.); John Green, president, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (C. I. O.); Walter P. Reuther, member, international executive board, United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America (C. I. O.).

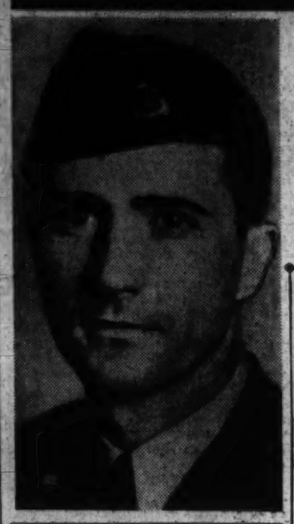
The labor representatives on McNutt's committee also were named yesterday to a policy committee to aid in determination of major production questions with Wendell Lund, director of the War Production Board's labor production division. Through Lund, the committee will have contact with WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson as well as with other WPB branches.

"No major policies will be made or changed by my division except with prior consultation and agreement of this committee," Lund stated. "This is a representative group of the highest officials of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations. President Green and President Murray have approved this plan and they also will be consulted by me and by this committee on major problems."

Out of Gas—Pilot Lands Bomber in Surf

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

COAST GUARDSMEN SALVAGE EQUIPMENT—Forced to make a crash-landing in the surf 50 feet off the beach at Margate City, N. J., because of lack of fuel, Capt. Morris Fitzgerald, pilot, put his Army bomber down safely and all five occupants were rescued. Capt. Fitzgerald was credited two weeks ago with sinking an enemy submarine while on coast patrol. Three of the bomber's occupants bailed out. A mechanic remained with the pilot and all were picked up in the surf by Coast Guardsmen. The latter are shown (above) clad in bathing suits as they salvaged equipment from the plane. Lieut. Col. Carson M. Borror (left), a former resident of the District now living in Arlington, Va., was one of those who parachuted. He was picked up in a meadow five miles north of Sea Isle



U. S. Fliers Prove Ability, Arnold Says

By the Associated Press

Mount Pleasant, Iowa, June 8.—Man for man and plane for plane, Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold regards the United States air forces as the finest in the world.

Addressing the Iowa Wesleyan College 100th anniversary commencement here today, the general, who commands the Army air arm, declared:

"Give our fliers anything approaching equality of numbers in the air and they blast the Japanese out of the sky. For every one of our planes shot down the Japs have lost four."

This Nation, he said, has "the best young pilots in the world and they are proving their superiority in combat in the air."

"No matter how brave our men are, no matter how fast their individual planes, we must have overwhelming air superiority to win this war," he observed. "Any land or sea forces which start out without air superiority are doomed to disaster. America's destiny rides with our young men in their fighters and bombers."

"I am telling Tokyo that we have thousands more Colin Kellys and Butch O'Hares and Jimmy Doolittles on the way. This is just the dawn of a day of wrath."

The general was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree as part of the commencement exercises.

The general credited the Army Air Force with this "score of destruction":

Thirty-three Jap warcraft bombed and sunk; 44 Jap transports, freighters and tankers bombed and sunk, more than 300 Jap fighters and bombers destroyed in air combat, and more than 200 Jap fighters and bombers destroyed on the ground.

The general, who recently returned from Europe, said he "did not fly to London to go on the defensive."

"Raids like those on Cologne and Essen were just starters to those which are to follow where United States and R. A. F. fighters and bombers ride the skies as a team."

The speaker said "the Axis knows that the next six months will spell victory or defeat for their forces. For the Axis it is now or never."

"The flying fortress has no peer in its field today," Arnold asserted, adding "our B-25C medium bombers can go farther, faster and carry more bombs than the best ships of our enemies."

Regarding aircraft production, he commented, "we are shooting for quantity and quality and it looks as if we will get both."

He added our production goals, which call for 60,000 planes this year, "are being met."

By the end of this year, the general said, the Army Air Force will have "over 60,000 officers and close to a million men. By June of next year, if it becomes necessary, we will double that."

Kalinin Factories and Homes Make Picture of Utter Ruin

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Kalinin, Russia, June 8.—The city of Kalinin, which was a battlefield during two months of the bitter winter fighting, is now a scene of devastation equal to anything in France during the last war, although the front today is some 70 miles to the west.

Kalinin, northwest of Moscow, is more preoccupied with healing the wounds of the winter struggle than in watching the new engagements in the west, centered around a deep spearhead thrust into the German positions and threatening their communications.

Confident that the Germans never will come here again, the municipal government headed by a woman mayor, Varyara Mikhailovna Gorbunova, already is carrying out plans for restoration.

Thousands Return

The people are pouring back over muddy roads and flooded lowlands to their ruined homes. The population which was 225,000 before the war dropped to 15,000 during the German occupation and now has risen to 170,000 since the Nazis were driven out on December 12. The retreating Germans burned virtually all that was not wrecked by bombs and shells.

The mayor is a vigorous 44-year-old former textile worker. She wears a mannish blue suit and has close-cut blond hair. When she returned to the city she found only 1630 dwellings of the original 11,033 intact.

"The city was dead," she said. "There was no water, streetcars or utilities of any kind. Now 25 miles of the original 30 miles of water lines and sewage system are restored. Two hospitals have been repaired and 15 schools are open for three shifts a day."

A preliminary allotment of 5,700,000 rubles was made for restoration of homes. The mayor estimated the eventual cost of rebuilding Kalinin at 177 million rubles.

The mayor estimated 95 per cent of Kalinin's textile industry had been destroyed by the Germans. She took me to see the Vokzhanov textile plant, where 7000 persons once worked. It now is entirely in ruins.

Great Plant in Ruins

The giant Proletarka plant which employed 40,000 workers is now largely a mass of brick rubble, twisted machinery and charrred walls open to the skies. On the ground floor of one wing, however, we found a few women patiently operating shuttles while the rain leaked through the ceiling.

Just outside the city we saw the main battlefield dominated by ruins of a schoolhouse where the Red army finally halted the Germans before driving them back in a struggle between October 14 and December 16. Atop the school was a hooded figure. The mayor said he was a lookout to see that the Germans never come back.

The ground of the Kalinin sector is too muddy and wet for large-scale battles, but the Germans are constantly probing Russian defenses in a vast salient thrust farther west than Smolensk.

The nearest living German to Kalinin is 70 miles away, Col. Andrei Kharchenko told me.

Weekly Paper, X-Ray, Barred; White Shirt Chief Gets 5 Years

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Postmaster General Walker yesterday ordered the weekly paper, X-Ray, permanently barred from the mails for sedition.

"A purposed attempt to embarrass and defeat the Government in its effort to prosecute the war"—the Postmaster General found—was a consistent, sustained and systematic feature of the 13 consecutive issues on which the charges were based.

The character and policy of the X-Ray were disclosed by The Post, on April 8, in one of a series of articles on defeatist propaganda.

The paper was cited on May 1 to show cause why its second-class mailing privilege should not be revoked and the publisher, Court Asher, appeared at a hearing on May 19. Upon the argument and evidence taken at the hearing, Post-Master General Walker made his finding that the paper was seditious.

Asher himself faces investigation by the Federal grand jury at Indianapolis later this month.

Asher May Contest Ruling in Court

Muncie, Ind., June 8 (AP).—Court Asher, publisher and owner of the X-Ray, weekly tabloid newspaper, said tonight that the ruling of Postmaster Frank C. Walker, revoking the second-class mailing privileges of his newspaper, probably would be contested in the courts.

Meanwhile, he said, the newspaper will be sent to subscribers as first-class mail. Carrier boys will deliver it in Muncie.

$2 Increase In Liquor Tax Gets Approval

A $2-a-gallon increase in the tax on whiskey and other distilled spirits, to raise $279,700,000 in additional revenue, yesterday was approved by the House Ways and Means committee.

The committee at the same time voted to increase the Federal tax on beer from $6 to $7 a barrel, for an estimated revenue yield of $65,000,000.

The two items were first to receive committee action on a Treasury list of 15 proposed excise tax increases to raise a grand total of $1,344,900,000 additional toward the Administration's $8,700,000,000 overall revenue goal.

Balk at Beer Tax Increase

The committee accepted the proposed rise of from $4 to $6 a gallon on whiskey without a hitch, but balked at the Treasury request for a $2-a-barrel increase on beer, compromising instead on a $1 increase.

Other Treasury excise recommendations apparently headed into difficulties include the proposal to increase the Federal tax on gasoline from 1½ cents to 3 cents a gallon, to more than double the tax on lubricating oil, and to increase the rate on tobacco and cigarettes.

The committee meanwhile passed over an opportunity for a showdown on independent proposals for a Federal retail sales tax by deciding to proceed tentatively with the closely related excise schedules.

Sales tax advocates, who insist that excises amount to the same thing, determined not to press their case until the committee has raised all it can by the excise route. It was pointed out that the excise action is tentative, as is all previous action on corporate and individual tax schedules.

The committee already has provided for about six billion dollars toward the $8,700,000,000 Treasury revenue objective but is not ready for a showdown on goals until it has canvassed the excise tax field.

First excise item awaiting action today is the Treasury proposal to nearly double taxes on wines, strongly opposed by West Coast members.

Other proposed excises call for sharply increased rates on photographic apparatus, pipe line transportation, communications, transportation, cigars, smoking tobacco, cigarettes and cigarette papers. A tax of 1 cent a bottle on soft drinks and a 15 per cent manufacturers excise on candy also has been recommended by the Treasury.

White Shirt Chief Given Five Years

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 8.—Federal Judge Leslie Darr today sentenced George W. Christians—"Socl" agent and White Shirt commander—to five years in prison for sedition.

Christians, and engineer, was convicted on four counts after a four-day trial last week. Judge Darr said he felt that the man ought to be confined, without parole, until the war is over.

Christians sent revolutionary propaganda to soldiers and was convicted of trying to foment disloyalty and block recruiting.

2 More Ships Sunk in Atlantic; Argentina Protests Torpedoing

By the Associated Press

Two more ships have gone down in the submarine war in the Atlantic, it was announced yesterday, bringing the unofficial total of merchant ships sunk to 254 since Pearl Harbor.

A Brazilian ship, the Alegrete, was torpedoed and sunk off South America, it was revealed today when 11 injured survivors reached La Guaira, Venezuela. Forty-six passengers and members of the crew were missing from the government-owned ship which was used to train officers for the Brazilian merchant marine as well as carry passengers and freight.

The Navy announced the loss of a small United States merchant vessel torpedoed in the Caribbean May 19 with the loss of three men. Thirty-four of the survivors escaped in two lifeboats and 30 hours later reached a Caribbean port.

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, June 8.—Neutral Argentina is protesting to Germany and Italy for the torpedoing of the Argentine tanker Victoria in American waters, it was learned today.

The ship was able to reach an merchant marine as well as to carry attack and Argentine naval officers made an exhaustive study of the cause of damage.

Argentina and Chile are the only American nations maintaining relations with the Axis. The attack on the Victoria was the first on an Argentine vessel since the United States entered the war.

It will be the second such protest by Argentina since the war started. The first, to Germany alone, followed the sinking of the Argentine freighter Uruguay off the coast of Spain in 1940. Germany's reply never was published.

U. S. Survivors Landed

A Gulf Port, June 8 (AP).—Survivors of a small United States freighter torpedoed in the Caribbean May 19 told here of the death of three of the crew of 37 in the early morning attack by a submarine believed to be German.

The sinking had been announced previously by the Navy which released details today. Twenty-four of the survivors were brought here.

"It scared hell out of me," admitted Joe Layton of San Antonio, Tex., "but I'll be going back—after I go home and get married."

Brazilian Ship Lost

Caracas, Venezuela, June 8 (AP).—Eleven burned and injured survivors of the 5,970-ton Brazilian ship Alegrete arrived at La Guaira yesterday a week after the ship was torpedoed and sunk 40 miles north of La Orchila.

The quartermaster said 46 passengers and members of the crew were missing. The vessel, which belonged to the Lloyd Brasileiro (government-owned) Line, was used to train officers for the Brazilian Eastern United States port after the passengers and freight.

Death Ends Brilliant Career Of Brian Bell, AP Chief Here

Brian Bell, chief of the Washington Bureau of the Associated Press, who started newspaper work while wearing knee pants in South Carolina and followed it through—getting all the fun there was to be had and many of the rewards—died at 5:40 a. m. yesterday at his home in Arlington, Va.

Mr. Bell, who was 52, was stricken Sunday with an acute coronary thrombosis while watching the Washington-Detroit baseball game—the sport he had reported hundreds of times and his love in athletics, which he covered from coast to coast.

Mr. Bell was alone at the double-header, and just before the end of the first game he telephoned his wife, saying he did not feel well, and she immediately drove in from her home in Arlington to pick him up. A recurring attack at 5:40 a. m. ended his life.

The funeral services will be conducted at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Arlington. Burial will be in the Columbia Gardens Cemetery, in Arlington.

Mr. Bell had headed the A. P. Bureau here since January 1, 1939. He brought with him from South Carolina, Atlanta, New Orleans, New York, Los Angeles and San Francsico a glittering background and a personality that everyone who knew him talked about yesterday.

Eulogized at White House

He covered the good stories in America's "Era of Wonderful Nonsense," like the Scopes evolution trial at Dayton, Tenn. He saw Ruth Snyder electrocuted after the Ruth Snyder-Judd Gray case. He wrote of the uproar surrounding the Sacco-Vanzetti affair in Massachusetts. He saw Lindbergh take off for Paris and reported the preparations. He went with Jimmy Walker, then Mayor of New York, to California when Walker pleaded for release of Tom Mooney. He covered many national conventions and reported Presidential press conferences and ball games with equal efficiency.

He discovered Gene Tunney's fondness for Shakespeare and boldly predicted a Tunney victory over Dempsey when the other experts gave the champion 3-to-1 odds.

He got administrative posts, one after another. But he never stopped being a reporter, newspapermen remembered.

Newspapermen everywhere in America knew him or of him, as did the Nation's officials. President and Mrs. Roosevelt were among the first to express grief at his death, and in the House, Representative Priest (Democrat) of Tennessee, a former newspaperman, offered an eulogy.

"The passing of a man like Brian Bell in a day when the world badly needs true and tried journalists even as it needs stalwart statesmen is, indeed, a grievous loss."

Expressions piled up from many quarters.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull said: "He represented the finest traditions of his honorable profession and will be greatly missed."

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes said: "Mr. Bell carried forward, and added to, the best traditions of the American newspaper profession."

Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard said: "An able newspaperman, he was in a very real sense a public servant in that many millions depended on his work for their knowledge of Government activities."

Supreme Court Justice James Francis Byrnes said: "He enjoyed to an unusual degree the confidence of men in public life, and deserved that trust."

Gene Tunney, former heavyweight boxing champion and an old friend of Mr. Bell, said: "He was a faithful friend as well as being an extremely faithful reporter and all-around newspaperman."

Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, said: "The noblest character with whom I have ever been associated is gone with the passing of Brian Bell."

White House Secretary Stephen Early, once an A. P. man, said "I think I should say we here today are all saddened by news of the sudden death of Brian Bell.

"As chief of the bureau, Brian had enormous responsibilities, but none of them was ever too great for him. I think the press of the country as a whole and the country itself has lost a most valuable man at a most unfortunate time. And I am certain that I express the President's sorrow, because the President and I have known Brian Bell for more than a score of years as a fine friend."

Tribute From Colleague

His associates talked of his humanness, of his golf "swing" that Gene Sarazen termed one of the most remarkable in the game.

Although he was the boss he stayed close to the big A. P. newsroom, and the men who worked there liked it.

He had the story-teller's knack, in his news stories and just when talking. One of his associates, Kirke L. Simpson, Pulitzer Prize winner wrote yesterday that "his genius as writer of sports or politics or the daily drift of the news is too well proven to require rehearsing here. His skill at weaving a human interest pattern, lightened with his own deft, humorous but never biting touch, is too well known to stress. It is all embodied in the news literature of the Nation under the simple legend: 'By Brian Bell.'"

Some of the stories he told weren't identified with the great cavalcade of news events he had witnessed. He could tell them on himself and liked to. There was the one about the time he and Knute Rockne shared the same after-dinner Gridiron program, when a heckler kept demanding that Rockne be introduced, when the heckler finally shouted "If we can't hear from Rockne, the big shot, let's hear from Bell, the little shot."

There was the time when Lloyd Lehbras, distinguished Associated Press foreign correspondent, came into the Washington bureau with a lieutenant colonel's uniform and commission, preparing to leave for the Philippines. All jumped up and saluted ceremoniously until the silence was broken by: "Did somebody call a Western Union boy?" Bell had arranged the welcome.

They said yesterday that Mr. Bell was a very human man to work for.

When he was a boy in his home town, Gaffney, S. C., he corresponded for The State, Columbia morning newspaper. After attending Presbyterian College, South Carolina, Davidson College and Washington and Lee University he went to the staff of The State and stayed for 15 years.

In 1924 he broke this long connection to join the Associated Press Atlanta bureau. Thereafter he was successively chief of the New Orleans bureau, a writer on the New York staff and chief of the Los Angeles and San Francisco bureaus, 1930. In 1936 he became news editor of the Western division of the Associated Press, directing personnel as far flung as Honolulu and traveling 30,000 miles in one year.

His "reportorial enthusiasm" didn't diminish with the increasing responsibility of administrative position, the Associated Press said of him yesterday. Just recently he went to Raleigh, N. C. on a special assignment from the A. P. general manager to interview Josephus Daniels, turned 80, and former wartime Secretary of the Navy. His stories were front page throughout the country.

Mr. Bell was married in 1917 to Miss Alberta Harris, of Gaffney, S. C. They have two children, Mrs. J. William Magee of Washington, and Brian Bell, jr., 17. Mr. Bell resided with his family at 4641 North Rock Spring Road, Arlington.

The White House Correspondents Association will be represented at the funeral by the following committee:

Douglas B. Cornell, Associated Press; George E. Durno, International New Service; Paul Wooton, New Orleans Times-Picayune; James M. Minifie, New York Herald Tribune; Fred Pasley, New York Daily News; Merriman Smith, United Press Association; D. Harold Oliver, Associated Press; William H. Lawrence, New York Times; Thomas F. Reynolds, Chicago Sun; Walter Trohan, Chicago Tribune; William C. Murphy, jr., Philadelphia Inquirer; Garnett D. Horner, Washington Star; John D. Leonard, Wall Street Journal.

The standing committee of correspondents in Congress has appointed the following members of the press galleries to attend the funeral:

Delbert Clark, New York Times; Arthur Sears Henning, Chicago Tribune; Alexander F. Jones, Washington Post; Ben McKelway, Evening Star; Michael Flynn, Times-Herald; Walker Stone, Scripps-Howard; William K. Hutchinson, International News Service; Eugene Duffield, Wall Street Journal; Ralph Smith, Atlanta Journal; Warren Francis, Los Angeles Times.

The members of the standing committee are:

William S. Neal, International News Service; Jerry O'Leary, Evening Star; Dewey L. Fleming, Baltimore Sun; George Stimpson, Houston Post, and Ned Brooks, Scripps-Howard.

Pending an appointment by New York headquarters, William L. Beale, connected with the A. P. bureau here for the past 10 years, will act as chief of bureau.

study as possible, looking toward the ascertainment of facts, not fiction, on the problems involved in rubber conservation. And when he had the information that would enable him to give the people some facts and reasons, he was going to tell them about it."

Fuel Rationing Administrator Joel Dean, of the Office of Price Administration announced yesterday that East Coast motorists would get an average of four gallons of gas a week, under the regular coupon-book system starting next month.

Under the present temporary set-up, nonessential drivers are allowed approximately three gallons weekly.

He explained the additional gallon would be permitted because of tighter controls made possible under the new plan. Considerably fewer "B" cards will be issued, the administrator said, since drivers will be compelled to prove their need of supplemental allowances.

Further, they must show to the satisfaction of local rationing boards that use of their cars is necessary in their business, that they have formed transportation "pools" of not less than four persons, or that no other mode of transportation is available to get them to and from work.

Expected to serve as a model if Nation-wide rationing is instituted, the East Coast plan is based on an allowance of 2880 miles of driving a year for the average nonessential motorist.

Every passenger car driver who registers will be issued a basic "A" book, containing 48 coupons, each good for four gallons.

"B" books, containing 16 coupons, will be issued on evidence of need and will be used in addition to the basic "A" book. Each "B" book will be dated, however, depending upon the local ration board's estimate of the applicant's gasoline needs. Thus only one "B" book might be usable for only three moonths, while another might be valid for a year.

A "C" book, containing 96 coupons, likewise will be issued to fit absolute requirements. On the basis of the motorists' proved statements for extra mileage, the local board will tear out coupons, if necessary, to cut the "C" book down to the driver's needs.

All commercial vehicles, including trucks, taxicabs, buses and Government-owned automobiles, will receive "S" books—likewise tailored to fit "C" books will be reviewed and reissued every three months; "S" books reviewed and reissued every four months.

Many Inquiries

Fuel Oil Users Worry About Future

Because of the wide publicity that has been given to the shortage of fuel oil, local home owners are becoming anxious as to what the situation will be next fall and are inquiring of heating contractors the possibility for converting their oil burners to the use of coal.

In line with the recent statement of Petroleum Coordinator Ickes before the Independent Oil Men's Association of New England to "urge them (oil burner owners) to convert them for the use of coal wherever possible," one of the largest oil companies in the East has written a letter to its local customers.

It suggests that in the event you have a convertible heating system, to get in touch with your local heating contractor or plumber. The War Production Board, the letter continues, recently removed restrictions on the manufacture and sale of grates. It will be prudent also to check local coal dealers.

"We urge this upon you," the letter states, "because there is the possibility that the railroads will be choked with traffic this fall, unless people all coal bins now.

"There will be insufficient supplies of petroleum products from now on through next winter. We do not know how this shortage of petroleum products will be rationed as between gasoline, furnace oil and heavy fuel."

A check with one of the large heating concerns yesterday disclosed that somes types of oil burners cannot be converted to coal consumption without large expense, perhaps requiring a new heating plant. Those with oil burner attachments to their furnaces, which previously used coal, can convert them back at slight cost.

Costs would vary, it was stated, because each heating plant would require an individual inspection, to determine material, labor and other costs.

Thousand Gallons Of Precious Gas Go Down Sewer

While Washington motorists were feeling elated at the Office of Price Administration's announcement that they soon may get each week another gallon of the gasoline, more than 1000 gallons of the stuff that makes the cars go was being washed into Northeast sewers by the Fire Department.

Police said the gasoline came from one of three 20,000-gallon storage tanks owned by Wilfred W. Floyd, of 2415 Bladensburg Road Northeast, whom they named as the owner of two filling stations.

The tanks are located at Fourth and Bryant Streets Northeast, about 20 blocks from the Bladensburg Road address. A great deal of mystery surrounded the spillage, police investigation failing to bring out whether loss of the fuel resulted from a leak in one of the tanks or whether attendants overestimated the capacity in filling it from a railroad tank car.

Police of the Twelfth Precinct and two fire companies were called to the scene to guard against the possibility of an explosion. After an hour's watch, however, the firemen were instructed to wash the waste gasoline into the sewers.

the chemical warfare service; $645,720,000 for the medical department, and $28,313,000 for the Army of the Philippines, although the islands are in the hands of the enemy.

The President asked for authority to transfer $12,700,000,000 of the new appropriation to aid the Nation's allies through the lend-lease program.

He also asked that the Secretaries of War and Navy be given authority to disallow big salary and bonus increases paid to officers and employes of war contracting companies "in excess of a reasonable amount," in determining excessive profits. The agencies are directed to renegotiate contracts with concerns where excessive profits are disclosed.

The request brought to $128,395,000,000 the total asked for the War Department's military needs for the fiscal years of 1941, 1942 and 1943, the latter beginning July 1 of this year. Navy Department appropriations and requests have exceeded 74 billion dollars for the same period.

On Capitol Hill, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill providing for construction of 200 "blimps" to be used in anti-submarine and patrol activities along the Atlantic seacoast. The measure originally provided for only 48 airshpis; the Senate increased the figure to 72 at the request of Secretary of the Navy Knox, and the House raised it to 200 after testimony by Admiral King, fleet commander in chief, before a committee.

25 Area Boys Off Tomorrow For Air School

The Navy announced yesterday 25 young men from Washington, Maryland and Virginia would leave tomorrow for the Navy's new preflight induction center at the University of Georgia.

OYSTER

David Fairfax Oyster, 18, of Chevy Chase, Md., who was sworn into the Navy on April 27 of this year by Secretary Frank Knox was one of a group of 25 young men from this area to be assigned to aviation training at the University of Georgia. Fairfax, the youngest man to enter the Navy as an aviation cadet, was publicly inducted during a radio ceremony at the Navy Building. All of the group are high school graduates who have taken advantage of the recent modification of Navy regulations permitting induction of young men with only high school certificates.

The youths face three months of "hardening" at Georgia to fit them for places in the Navy's aeronautical organization. Next they will undergo a similar period at naval reserve aviation bases to qualify them for advanced training at regular air stations at Pensacola, Fla., and Corpus Christi, Tex.

Completion of the courses will qualify them for commissions as ensigns in naval aviation or second lieutenants in the Marine Flying Corps.

The group comprised:

Virginia—William Maxwell Baskin, 3615 North Albemarle Street, Arlington; John Edgar Peabody, Vienna; John Manley Thompson, Vienna.

Maryland—Robert Wells Butler, 3701 Hamilton Street, Hyattsville; Charles Edward Dole, Chestertown; John Roth Frederick, Baltimore; Robert Porter Hatter, Baltimore; Albert Louis Leaf, Williamsport; Edwin Roland Mowbray, jr., Randallstown; David Fairfax Oyster, 116 Inverness Road, Chevy Chase; George Kidd Perkins, Bradley Lane, Bethesda; Edwin Etienne Raphel, Cumberland; Charles Thomas Wright, Doubs; Bernard Walls Zurhorst, Woodacres.

The group leaving Washington will be joined at Richmond by Lester Leroy Hewitt, Crainsville, Va., and Bertram Alfred Jones, jr., Richmond. At Norlina, N. C., the party will pick up Joseph Chatham, jr., Salisbury, Md.

Three Ships Sunk Off Mozambique, Vichy Says

High Court Rules On Overtime Pay

By William R. Spear
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Supreme Court ruled yesterday that the wage-hour law requirement of time-and-a-half pay for overtime beyond 40 hours a week meant 150 per cent of an employe's regular pay rate, not 150 per cent of the Act's minimum pay provisions. Th[e] no matter how far a worker's regular pay exceeded the minumum, he still would be entitled to time-and-a-half pay for overtime.

At the same time, however, the court upheld a system by which an employer contracted to pay his employes a fixed sum each week, the amount being designed to cover overtime at the statutory time-and-a-half rate but the fixed sum to be paid for either a regular or an overtime week. It said there was no hard-and-fast rule for determining "regular" pay.

The court found that Congress intended the Wage-Hour Act to penalize employers working their men more than 40 hours a week, observing that "reduction of hours was a part of the plan from the beginning." This purpose had been denounced by a litegant as "square in the face of the needs of national defense."

The decisions, interpreting the law's overtime pay provisions for the first time, were made in two cases which may be summarized as follows:

1. The Overnight Motor Transportation Co. of Baltimore employed William H. Missel at $27.50 a week. His hours were variable but he averaged 65 a week and sometimes worked 80. The law then fixed 25 cents an hour as the minimum wage and Missel got nothing extra for overtime because the company contended it already was paying him more than required, figuring 40 hours at 25 cents, or $10, plus 40 more at 37½ cents, or $15, totaling $25.

Under the court's ruling, however, Missel's regular pay was $27.50 for 40 hours. Since this came to about 68 cents an hour, he would be entitled to pay at the rate of $1.02 an hour for hours beyond 40. The court upheld Missel's right to claim damages equal to the overtime pay even though the employer acted in good faith.

2. The A. H. Belo Corporation, publisher of the Dallas (Tex.) Morning News and owner of radio station WFAA, contracted with its employes when the wage-hour law took effect to continue paying them their existing salaries for their existing hours. The contracts stipulated an hourly rate, obtained in most cases by dividing the guaranteed weekly salary by 60.

Thus if a man's salary was $60 a week his regular hourly rate would be $1 and his overtime rate $1.50. If he worked 40 hours he would get the full $60 but he might be required to work up to 53 hours for the same pay, since 40 hours at $1 and 13 at $1.50 would come to only $59.50. But if he worked 54 hours or more he would get more than $60.

The court, in a 5-to-4 decision, found that this complied with the law.

Justice Byrnes, in the majority decision, said that "nothing in the act bars an employer from contracting with his employe to pay them the same wages that they received previously, so long as the new rate equals or exceeds the minimum required by the act."

Justices Reed, Black, Douglas and Murphy dissented, saying that by such a "device" as the Belo contract, "astute management may avoid many of the disadvantages of ordinary overtime, chief of which is a definite increase in the cost of labor as soon as the hours worked exceeded the statutory work week."

Justice Reed, who wrote the dissenting opinion in the Belo case, wrote the majority opinion in the Missel case, an 8-1 decision. Justice Roberts dissented but wrote no opinion.

The Missel decision said that the purpose of the Wage-Hour Act "was not limited to a scheme to raise substandard wages" but that the overtime pay requirement was designed also to apply "financial pressure . . . to spread employment." The law took effect in 1938.

"In a period of widespread unemployment and small profits," Reed said, "the economy inherent in avoiding extra pay was expected to have an appreciable effect in the distribution of available work."

Bill of Rights Qualified

In another decision, the Supreme Court held that the exercise of free speech, press and religion may be limited by legislative bodies "to Times, places and methods . . . not at odds with the preservation of peace and good order."

This decision, declaring that "the rights of which our Constitution speaks . . . are not absolutes to be exercised independently of other cherished privileges, protected by the same organic instrument," was delivered in upholding the right of three cities to impose license fees on members of Jehova's Witnesses who distributed religious literature for which they sought contributions.

It was a 5 to 4 decision which impelled Chief Justice Stone and Justice Murphy to vigorous dissenting opinions, in which Justices Black and Douglas joined.

The latter three, moreover, took occasion to reverse their stand in the celebrated 1940 case which upheld a Pennsylvania law requiring school children to pledge allegiance to the American flag. This could in no way alter the latter decision, however, for it was an 8-to-1 vote with Stone the only dissenter.

This law also had been fought by members of Jehovah's Witnesses, who said it violated their religious convictions to pledge allegiance to other than God. Black, Douglas and Murphy said that yesterday's majority opinion "suppresses or tends to suppress the free exercise of a religion practiced by a minority group;" that it was "but another step in the direction" which the flag salute decision "took against the same religious minority;" and that:

"Since we joined in the opinion in the Gobitis (flag salute) case, we think this is an appropriate occasion to state that we now believe that it was also wrongly decided."

The court also ordered that Thomas Henry Robinson, jr., convicted of the kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Stoll in Louisville, Ky., in 1934, be permitted to apply to the Ninth Circuit Court for a writ of habeas corpus.

The high court found that there was conflict of views among the judges of the Federal Circuit Court and hence reversed that court's denial of a writ of habeas corpus and vacated its judgment.

Robinson is serving a life stentence in Alcatraz.

Triplet Sisters Among 150 Nurses Receiving Emblems

TRADITION—The Chappelear triplets, Virginia, Flavia and Rise (left to right) were among the nurses from local hospital who signed up yesterday with the Red Cross Reserve. The triplets, 20 years old, were born at Providence Hospital, where they are now in training

Nearly 150 nurses—including triplet sisters—from the seven training schools of the District were inducted into the new Red Cross Student Nurse Reserve yesterday in exercises at the Pan American Union Building, Seventeenth Street and Constitution Avenue Northwest.

The triplets, Ellen Rose, Mary Virginia and Elizabeth Flavia Chappelear, of Benedict, Md., were born in Providence Hospital and are now students there.

Miss Lillian Bischoff, chairman of the District Red Cross Nursing Committee, welcomed the student nurses into the ranks of the Red Cross. Other short addresses of welcome were made by Lieut. Col. Florence Blanchfield, assistant to Mary A. Beard, National Director of the Red Cross Nursing Service; and Lieut. Mary Touse, second in command of the Navy Nurse Corps.

Following the welcome, the nurses received rectangular pins, certifying their membership in the American Student Nurse Reserve Corps. After the pins were awarded, the nurses formed into columns of fours and marched to the statue of Jane Delano, founder of the American Red Cross, and laid a wreath at its base. Tea and sandwiches were then served in the garden of the Pan American Union.

Names of the student nurses follow:

Make Every Day Flag Day, Mason Urges

The United States Flag, flying high over the fighting in the world's far-off places, was paid resounding honors here yesterday with the start of National Flag Week.

Speaking before a large assemblage in Post Square, where some 25 patriotic organizations massed the National Colors, District Commissioner Guy Mason asked that the Flag be honored "not only today and this week but every day."

"We should take this occasion to dedicate ourselves to a never ceasing, daily payment of homage to that Flag, not because it is a flag but because it is the symbol of the soul of America," the Commissioner said.

A Flag At Every Fireside

Recalling the President's proclamation of National Flag Week and giving a sketch of the Flag's history, Commissioner Mason said:

"Let there be a flag at ever fireside and let us say to each other, as courageous sons of courageous mothers go forth to battle to preserve the soul of America—our National soul shall not perish.

"Let the sacrifices at home equal those of the battle front, if necessary.

"Let us say to those great nations which have joined hands in this fight for the preservation of our freedoms as well as those which they regard as their freedoms—which are their national souls—that united we shall prevail."

Audience Pledges Allegiance

The program, forerunner of several to be held here through Sunday, was opened at 11:45 a. m. with a 15-minute concert of patriotic music by the United States Marine Band. Following the massing of the Colors, the gathering was led in a pledge of allegiance to the Flag by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, provost marshal for the District.

"Wave That Flag, America," patriotic song composed by Phelps H. Adams and Howard Acton, Washington newspapermen, was sung by Bill Coyle, William Tyler Page, president general, United States Flag Association, recited his composition, "The American's Creed."

The Flag will be honored in observances to be held in the public schools on Friday and again on Sunday with the dedication of the American Legion Home in Meridian Park at 4 p.m. The Washington Elks Club will hold its annual Flag Day exercises at 5 p.m. Sunday at the Sylvan Theater.

D. C. Dentists Urged to Seek Army Posts

A call for Washington dentists to apply for commissions in the Army Dental Corps was made yesterday by Dr. G. Albert Smith, dental chairman of the District Procurement and Assignment Service.

Reporting that the Army needs several thousand dentists for immediate duty, Dr. Smith asked Washington dentists under 38 years of age and those over 38 who are classified as 1-A under Selective Service to apply at once to him.

In turn, he will place their names before the Army recruiting board here.

A telegram from Lieut. Col. Sam F. Seeley, chief of the Procurement and Assignment Service, said that dentists who indicated the Army as their preferred branch of service in filling out questionnaires recently sent out by Seeley to physicians "are hereby officially asked to apply for commissions."

The Procurement and Assignment Service was created October 31, 1941, under the F. S. A. to insure appropriate placement of doctors, as well as to prevent their being drafted in such numbers as to endanger the public health. In 1917 the influenza epidemic wrought great havoc because of a shortage of doctors.

All physicians and dentists have been registered and have filled out questionnaires where they stated which service they preferred.

Navy Workers Cut Accident Rate

The Navy announced yesterday that despite the huge increase in work at navy yards during the past year, the accident rate for 1941 showed a 7.7 per cent drop over the year before.

Man hours worked in naval shore establishments was nearly double that in 1940, increasing from 228,739,143 to 452,390,783, it was said. Despite this influx of largely green hands the Navy's accident frequency rate was 13.2 per cent compared with a rate of 15.4 for the Nation's largest industries as set by the National Safety Council's index.

The rate of severity of bad accidents showed even greater gains. The Navy accident severity rate was reduced 38.5 per cent from 1940 to 1941. The rate was 0.53 as compared with industry's rate of 1.53.

Officials attributed the gains to Navy's educational program.

Pennsylvanian Gets Life In Robbery-Slaying

Chambersburg, Pa., June 8 (AP).—Elmer L. Daywalt, 22, Montgomery township, Franklin County, was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Watson Davison for the robbery-slaying of 75-year-old Harry Tawney on January 10. Daywalt pleaded guilty to the slaying.

U. S. Evens Score, Adm. King Says

Williamsburg, Va., June 8.—Admiral Ernest J. King told the graduating class at the College of William and Mary today that the "officers and men of the Navy—as representative Americans—have no lack of confidence in their ability to deal with the enemy on anywhere near equal terms.

"At the beginning of this war, for a variety of reasons," the commander in chief of the United States Fleet said, "Those terms were decidedly unequal and in favor of the enemy. . . . We have already made some progress in overcoming those inequalities.

"Our capacity for production is well known. Our trained man power is increasing steadily under an accelerated program. A good share of our naval forces have had the necessary seasoning.

"What is more important," he added, "we believe the American man is unequaled as an intelligent and fearless fighter."

Honored With Degree

Admiral King, who received an honorary degree of doctor of laws at today's exercises closing the 249th session of the college, declared he was "confident that we shall win this war, and that not only will our own freedom be preserved, but that of untold millions be restored to them.

"It will linvolve untold labor, a multitude of heartaches, and sacrifices such as we have yet never known.

"I am further confident," he added, "that when we have won this war, we shall see to it that the ability of any person or of any people to enslave others, physically or mentally or spiritually, shall become forever impossible."

John Stewart Bryan, president of William and Mary since 1934, who has announced his retirement from that office, also received a degree of doctor of laws, voted him by the college's board of visitors. Bryan will become chancellor when his successor takes office.

The college also conferred LL.D degrees on Homer L. Ferguson, chairman of the Newport News Shipbuilding Co.; George Preston Coleman of Williamsburg, former State highway commissioner, and Robert De Blois Calkins, dean of the school of business, Columbia University.

Student awards included:

Sullivan Award for Character—Mildred Anne Hill, Richmond; Edgar J. Fisher, jr., New York City, and the Right Rev. John Boyd Bentley, Nenana, Alaska.

Society of Cincinnati—James Eldred Swartz, Mount Jackson.

Lord Baltimore Medal for Distinguished Scholarship—Mary Cecilia Thedieck, Suffolk.

Court Upholds Denial of Damages To Mrs. Kenney

The United States Court of Appeals upheld yesterday a District Court verdict denying damages of $10,000 to the wife of the late Representative Edward A. Kenney (Democrat) of New Jersey against the operators of the Carlton Hotel, where her husband fell to his death January 27, 1938.

The appeal was based on the refusal of the lower court to admit expert testimony on the construction of the window from which Kenney fell and a plea that the court should not have directed a jury verdict.

The opinion, handed down by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner and Justice Henry W. Edgerton and Wiley Rutledge, said there was no proof of the manner in which Congressman Kenney met his death. He was said to have attended a banquet on the night of the accident and then gone to bed in the room of a friend.

Draft Officials Study Federal Job Deferments

Selective Service officials were still studying the request yesterday of Senator Tydings of Maryland and his committee for review of 1000 cases of Federal employes, whom, Tydings stated, had been deferred due to their jobs.

Tyding's report questioned the deferment of several young men under 25, who had been declared "indispensable" to the Government service. He pointed to the fact that their civil service records had been brief, in some instances.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Selective Service declared that Government bureaus have been most reasonable in requesting deferment for their employes. He added that some deferments have been made, no doubt, by small town draft boards, impressed with the signature of a prominent bureau chief.

It was emphasized that many young men now working in Washington are registered with their home town draft boards, and in some instances may not have even followed the regular procedure in asking for deferment.

However, those registered locally are given various weeding out tests, it was stated. Heads of sections recommend those they believe necessary to the Government service. Each department conducts a survey, as to the necessity of retaining its personnel. Already the Commerce and Treasury Departments and the Federal Bureau of Investigation have completed their surveys.

In the meantime, the Senate committee is not expected to have its final findings ready before the end of the week for submission to Selective Service Director Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey.

National Selective Service headquarters will be given a report by the committee, with a statement of the alleged abuses, and a request that the cases be reviewed.

Included in the Congressional report will be the name of the department, name of registrant, his title, grade and salary, and the local board which granted him deferment, it was stated.

Whether national or State headquarters or local board will go over the cases has not been decided, it was said, nor what procedure the inquiry will follow in regard to the mechanics of it.

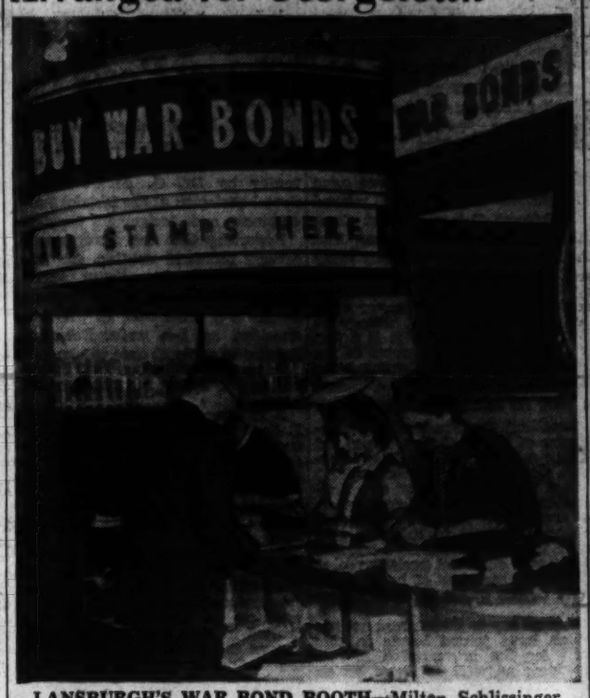
Raid Defense Demonstration Arranged for Georgetown



LANSBURGH'S WAR BOND BOOTH—Milton Schlissinger, treasurer of Lansburgh & Bros. department store, makes the first purchase from Mrs. C. Reynolds Weaver at the new war bond and stamp booth opened yesterday at Lansburgh's

Georgetown residents will have a first-hand opportunity to learn civilian defense against air raids tomorrow night at the Georgetown mass meeting at Western High School Stadium, when exhibits, incendiary bomb demonstrations, and descriptions of bombing conditions will be presented under the auspices of the Georgetown air raid warden service.

Chief speaker at the meeting, which begins at 8 p. m., will be Alfred H. Lecheminant, officer of the Royal Air Force delegation to this country and organizer and former chief warden of the British A. R. P. in northwest England. Mr. Lecheminant, on the organizing committee of the civilian air raid defense in that section of the British Isles, did his work throughout the 1940 summer blitz of Manchester and other British industrial cities. He will relate experiences of air raids, and describe the organization, communication, medical and safety methods worked out by the British civilian population.

A message from James L. Landis, national director of the Office of Civilian Defense, will also be a feature of the open-air program.

Through a "question and answer bee," conducted by Arthur Godfrey, radio commentator, residents will be told of blackout rules, means of obtaining emergency police and medical service during an air raid, and the most practical methods of maintaining normal household operations during a blackout and at the same time preventing any light from reaching the view of enemy airmen.

Climax of the meeting will be demonstrations of extinguishing incendiary bombs.

Several organizations, including the Red Cross, American Women's Volunteer Service and air raid warden service, will have exhibits at the stadium, where equipment will be demonstrated and civilian defense service outlined.

Legion to Sponsor Benefit Vaudeville

1500 Now Attend Emergency Nursery

Results of a survey announced yesterday by the Emergency Committee for Day Care of Young Children showed that approximately 1500 children of preschool ages are in District nursery schools and that 758 "working mothers" are represented among their parents.

Primarily, it was declared in the survey, the schools are staffed by persons who "have not been equipped by training or experience to work with preschool children" are so located geographically that their services are denied many who need them. Inequality of distribution was illustrated by the figures showing 28 schools in the northwest and only one in the northeast.

Cooperative development of higher standards was pointed to as a nursery school need. Also pointed to was the need for more schools, more refresher courses for persons working with small children and for cooperative procurement of professional personnel.

Raid Warden Aide Adamant On Resignation

Assistant Chief Air Raid Warden Mary Mason, who yesterday resigned, stated last night that she would not accept a reappointment.

Three other assistant chiefs, Arch McDonald, Harry N. Stull and Col. F. J. Atwood indicated that they would return to the warden service at the request of Chief Air Raid Warden William J. Milsham.

The assistants resigned following Milsham's statement that complete liberty to choose his own assistants was one of the provisions of his accepting the post vacated two weeks ago by Fire Battalion Chief Clement Murphy.

It was explained last night that this provision was interpreted a little more strongly than it was meant. Three of the resignations were made as formalities "to prevent embarrassment" to Milsham.

Milsham said yesterday that reappointments had been made and accepted by all the chiefs. However, Miss Mason remained adamant.

Miss Mason started her civilian defense activities last fall when she organized the feeding service. After she had over 90 feeding units set up, the feeding and housing services were combined under the direction of Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, and Miss Mason became Murphy's assistant in charge of enlisting and training women air raid wardens.

Girl Dancers Put in Charge Of D. C. Board

The Women's Battalion, which furnishes girls as dancing partners for training camp entertainments, will now be under the direct supervision of the District Recreation Board, it was announced last night following the board's second meeting.

Consistent with the board's policy of centralization, it accepted the responsibility for the organization and activity of the Battalion only "provided that direct control for the administration and supervision be centralized in the Recreation Department."

A request from Civilian Defense Mobilization Chief Conrad Van Hyning that the board take over the Child Care centers was granted only in part. The board will supervise the recreation and furnish recreational supplies, but it stated that the actual welfare service, including feeding, intake and the keeping of attendance records were not "normal functions of the Recreation Board."

Maximum utilization of the District school facilities for summer recreational purposes was foreseen as District Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou was authorized to revise the rules and regulations for the use of school buildings and grounds.

Ballou reported that the School Board had approved the use of high school stadiums on Sundays for general recreational purposes. Some 80 school buildings and grounds are already included in the summer recreational program.

The Board of Education also approved the employment of school teachers in summer playground work.

Henderson to Fix Antifreeze Price

Price Administrator Leon Henderson warned yesterday that within the next week he will establish maximum price level for alcohol and antifreeze mixtures "substantially below those now charged by some manufacturers."

The prospective ceilings, in some cases 10 cents a gallon below prices now prevailing, will be fixed at the levels obtaining in mid-March of this year, Henderson said. Retail prices will be about 35 cents per quart for high-cost-production antifreezes, and about 23 cents a quart for the low-cost-production mixtures.

DOMESTIC FINANCE CORPORATION
ANNOUNCES NEW RATE REDUCTION

Domestic Finance, in keeping with its policy of providing a modern Personalized Loan Service at the most reasonable cost, announces a reduction in interest rate to 2% per month on all loans from $50 to $300.

In accordance with the Virginia Small Loan Law, a 2% per month rate is to become effective in that State on June 27; Domestic believes, however, that all residents of this territory should benefit from these savings. Consequently, the new rate is now available at the Domestic offices in Maryland, as well as in Virginia.

This new reduced rate cuts the cost as much as 33% below the maximum on some loans. Whether or not it is possible for the company to continue supplying small loans at this reduced rate to people residing in this territory depends upon how successfully our business can operate at this low a rate.

For the past twelve years Domestic Finance has been acting as a financial counsellor to thousands of individuals and families residing in this locality. This personalized financial service provides quick cash loans to meet emergencies, to purchase needed articles, or for any good financial need, to the vast majority of persons who are unable to meet commercial bank requirements or who do not have established credit.

Domestic also provides, as a part of their financial service, a HOME ADVISORY SERVICE free to the public for the benefit of those seeking advice on home economics or budget problems. Lois Foster, head of this Department, gives personal attention to all inquiries. Hundreds of persons living in this community have found her advice invaluable in matters of budgeting, nutritious menus and recipes, home furnishings, and the purchase and care of clothes.

CASH LOANS NOW AVAILABLE AT 2% PER MONTH ON ALL LOANS FROM $50 to $300

Interest rates and payments are not alike at all loan companies. Because our rates are substantially less than allowed by the Small Loan Law we suggest you compare our payments with others before you borrow.

Geographer Gets Honorary Degree

DR. JOHN OLIVER LA GORCE

Dr. John Oliver La Gorce, vice president of the National Geographic Society here, today will be awarded the degree of doctor of science and geography by the University of Tampa, Fla., for "outstanding work in the diffusion of geographical knowledge."

Dr. La Gorce has been closely allied with the growth of southern Florida for more than two decades. He was an associate of the late Carl Fisher, who developed Miami Beach from a mangrove swamp. A Miami Beach boulevard, an island and golf course are named for La Gorce.

In announcing the degree, Dr. James Elliott Mooney, president of the university, said, "I consider Dr. La Gorce among the outstanding people associated with the growth of Florida."

Dr. La Gorce lives at 2440 Kalorama Road Northwest.

McCormick Appoints Georgian to Succeed Late Rep. Boland

Majority Leader McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, announced yesterday the appointment of Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, as majority whip of the House, succeeding Representative Patrick Boland of Pennsylvania, who died recently.

Ramspeck, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, long has been known as the friend of the Government employe.

Since 1929 he has represented the Fifth District of Georgia in the House. In addition to his Civil Service chairmanship, he is presently a member of the Claims, Labor and Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committees.

His interest in the welfare of Government workers is said to have dated back to 1911, when the Democrats obtained control of the House and started wholesale replacement of Federal employes with Democrats. Ramspeck was offered, and accepted, the post of chief clerk of the House postoffice.

He replaced a 35-year-old Republican, married and with several children, whose ousting worried the young Georgian considerably. He has said that at that time he determined to correct such a system of turnover depending on the outcome of political campaigns.

When he came to the House as a member he undertook the task and has been credited in large measure with changes in the Civil Service laws that have followed.

Recently he was quoted as saying: "I think the biggest question today is not whether the military branches are good. They are. But they can't do their job unless they have the support of a qualified well trained civil arm of Government. If the civil branch functions efficiently our national defense will be a reality. You can't have efficiency and economy under a spoils system."

Food Stamp, School Lunch Funds Survive

A Senate-House conference committee yesterday retained a Senate item of $44,500,000 for operation of the food stamp and school lunch program but sent the 680-million-dollar farm appropriation bill back to the House for separate votes on virtually all other diputed sections.

The committee failed to compromise a section amended by the Senate to permit the sale of 125 million bushels of Government-held wheat for about 83 cents a bushel.

Neither could the conferees agree on Senate additions of 25 million dollars in cash and 65 million dollars in lending authority for the Farm Security Administration.

The conference approved Senate action in reappropriating $44,500,000 that had been impounded by Presidential order during the past two years for disposal of agricultural surpluses. This reappropriation would bring the total available for the free school lunches and food stamp plan to approximately 175 million dollars, an amount considered sufficient to provide lunches for several million school children but requiring some contraction of the stamp plan for persons on relief.

London Names Resident Minister in West Africa

London (Tuesday), June 9 (AP).—The Dominions Office announced today appointment of Viscount Swinton as resident minister in West Africa to serve under the war cabinet with cabinet rank.

The main purpose of the appointment, modeled on that of the minister of state in the Middle East, will be to ensure effective cooperation in prosecution of the war of all services—civil and military—throughout the British colonies in West Africa.

Fighting Congestion

It is impossible to think about the new zoning regulations requiring space for the parking of automobiles in connection with new residential buildings without a feeling of regret. These rules should have gone into effect two years ago at the latest. As it is, they will take effect next September 8 after most of the defense and wartime building booms are far advanced. In the interim, the congestion of Washington's central area has been greatly intensified.

To have these regulations in effect at all, however, will be a notable gain. They should be of great value in the future as a means of preventing the overcrowding of residential areas. For after September 8 all apartment houses, flats, tenements and hotels will have to provide parking space for at least a substantial part of their tenants or patrons. The city will no longer rely almost solely upon its streets for the storage of automobiles. And, incidentally, the necessity of providing parking space will discourage the crowding of every inch of land in some areas with big apartment buildings.

In the last few years Washington has been rapidly losing its fight to avoid the type of congestion that plagues New York, Philadelphia and several other American cities. These zoning regulations are a notable victory for those who wish to see the city grow outward rather than upward—to expand rather than to get jammed with more stone and concrete in already overbuilt areas. But this is only one of many precautions that must be taken if intolerable congestion is to be avoided. And precautions have been thrown to the winds in this war period. The sooner orderly planning can be restored, the less painful and costly will be the Capital's postwar adjustments.

Brian Bell

Brian Bell was one of the outstanding newspapermen of his generation, a reporter of great ability, an extraordinarily competent executive who during the past three and a half years had with great devotion and efficiency carried out the exacting duties of chief of the Associated Press' Washington Bureau. Above and beyond everything, however, was his capacity for friendship. A man of great charm and rare wit, he endeared himself to all who were privileged to know him. He numbered his friends by the thousands, and his passing at the all-too-early age of 52 is a grievous loss to his profession and to the Nation.

Explaining Sinkings

Chairman Vinson's statement on the antisubmarine campaign is, in effect, little more than a comprehensive explanation of why the campaign has not been more successful. To be sure, the obvious intent of the statement is to reassure the public that the Navy is doing everything possible to curb submarine depredations, and to imply that from now on there will be fewer sinkings. But for all Chairman Vinson's reasoned optimism, his statement does not, and probably cannot, carry the conviction it should. One reason for this is that the public has grown tired of being fed on promises of future accomplishment. To the Navy, with its understanding of the magnitude of the problem involved, this doubtless seems unreasonable.

Yet it is only fair to point out that the Navy has fallen down badly in presenting its case to the public. As a result, practically all that the public has had to go on has been the mounting list of sinkings, and the knowledge that sinkings have exceeded new ship production. Inevitably, this has contributed to the rise of all sorts of stories of Navy inefficiency, complacency, and so on. Leaving entirely aside the question of whether or not some of these stories have been true, they would never have gained currency, had the Navy taken pains to head them off by explaining, in so far as possible, the facts of the situation. This has at last been done, of course, through the medium of Chairman Vinson's Navy-approved statement.

But it comes too late to command the public confidence which might once have been achieved. Consequently, there remains an increment of suspicion about protective measures that will not down. If, as we are now led to believe, sinkings have actually reached their maximum and will decline markedly in the weeks ahead, then such suspicion will tend to disappear. But it won't disappear until the facts bear out the promise implicit in Chairman Vinson's statement. Assuming that the Navy is really interested in promoting public confidence, it would do well to study its presentation of the conduct of the antisubmarine campaign as a case example of how not to gain the country's understanding.

Tip For Congress

Many of our legislators are smarting under the public criticism which has been visited upon Congress since war broke out. An example of their touchiness was their resentment of a remark by Secretary Morgenthau last Wednesday on the tardiness and inadequacy of tax proposals which in less sensitive days would have elicited no comment. Some members have asked how the prevailing criticism can be removed. Here is one suggestion: Let them take the Domestic Silver Buying Act of July 6, 1939, off the statute books. That would show the people that Congress has begun to tune its wartime thoughts and actions to the national welfare. The lack of enough evidence of such a change is what irritates the American people. It seems to them that, in spite of Pearl Harbor, exclusive loyalty to sections and special interests still holds our Congress in its grip.

But for Congress silver could become a good soldier as a substitute metal in the fight for freedom. It is the handyman of the metals. Just as men were hired in the Civil War as proxies, so silver could take the place of several other metals. There is no dearth of it. While we skimped on the stockpiling of rubber, manganese, tin and a host of strategic and critical materials, we bought and are buying the white metal lavishly. Even the silverites would be hard put to it nowadays to explain the buying purpose beyond the Midas-joy of possessing it. The metal is bought at home and abroad by the Treasury and stuck away in vaults at West Point and other centers. Actually, the Treasury pays 71 cents an ounce, or double the market price, for the metal from our domestic mines. At this rate no industrialist, struggling with bottlenecks that silver might remedy, can compete with the Treasury. The result is that at a time when we need all our resources employed, the silver mining industry is kept hard but fruitlessly at work, doing nothing except to fill valuable vault space with a metal that cannot be used.

To be sure, an Administration effort is being made to have the accumulated silver "lent" to industry. A portion already has been so "lent" to take the place of copper as bus bars in the new aluminum and magnesium plants. The Treasury has proposed that the remainder, over 50,000 tons, should be "lent" to industry in place of copper in the plants which are to make butadiene from alcohol. The timidity of asking that silver should be made available to war industry by way of loan for restricted purposes instead of by unrestricted sale was due to a desire not to tread unduly on the corns of the powerful silverites. In other words, at a time when an appeal to patriotism should be enough, at a time when the Nation needs this silver to win the war, a proposal was put up to the silver bloc wearing the earmarks of a bargain. If the silver were "lent," then it would be returnable to the Treasury, and there would be no tampering with the silver policy. The industry likewise could be kept at work digging out silver for 71 cents an ounce. However, the silverites in Congress are not to be cajoled. They are reported to have refused their consent even to this restricted loan of the metal out of fear that any such deal might be the forerunner of the repeal of the thoroughly discredited silver legislation.

The pusillanimous approach of the Administration deserved this repulse. War needs are not something to bargain over. Our war industry requires access to both the mines and the stockpile in order to relieve bottlenecks in the production program. Silver, for instance, is a good substitute for tin. Canning factories, so essential to the "Food for Freedom" aspect of the lend-lease program, are closing down for want of tin solder. Fifty tons of silver could serve in place of 2000 tons of antimony in, for example, the positive plates of storage batteries. Silver could be employed as a coating in such things as tank cars and dairy equipment. Yet, except for the bus bar deal, the silver mines and silver stocks remain immobilized, as if there were no war on. They have been deferred, in other words, from contributing to the war when their service might at last be useful.

An absurdity in peacetime, silver buying and the immobilization of existing stocks in these times have become nothing short of a crime. It is, indeed, the crime of '42. Silver, which has been the white elephant of this Administration, has suddenly found a raison d'etre, and at a time when the Nation is in peril. Never before has there been such a demand for it, and never again will there be. Yet the silverites want to see the metal stay in its role as a white elephant. Let Congress wipe this shameful subsidy off the statute books and allow the accumulated silver to do a job of work. In enlisting silver in the army for freedom, the legislators would be demonstrating to the country that they are likewise enlisted. By their works, not their words, ye shall know them. That applies to Congress no less than to the people at large.

Finland's Choice

The horns of the dilemma on which Finland has been caught for almost 12 months have sharpened within the last week. The visit of Hitler to Finland can only mean one thing. Nazi Germany, finding the going hard in Russia, is trying to persuade the Finns to block the northern supply route which now feeds the Russian fighting machine. Mr. Hull's action is equally pointed. On Saturday, at a press conference, he said that the State Department is "watching the situation most closely to see whether this visit of Hitler results in any greater degree of cooperation with Hitler against the United Nations." The observation from Washington must be just as embarrassing to Helsinki as the visit from Hitler.

The overriding fact of the Finnish situation is that Finland is fighting her own war against Russia. This is the inference of Hitler's visit. The Fuehrer does not take the trouble of going on a long journey in order to see a satellite. The satellite comes to see him. If there were any other interpretation of Hitler's visit, it will be put at rest by Mr. Hull's remarks. As he said, the visit is "a deliberate ruse on the part of the Germans to compromise Finland further in the eyes of the anti-Axis world and a cover for the desperate attempts of Hitler to induce Finland to make further contributions to Axis military campaigns." Thus Finland is in a different case from Hungary, Bulgaria and Rumania. We have declared war on those countries, but not on Finland. The reason is that Finland has not yet been "compromised" like the Balkan states, which, indeed, had already declared war on this country.

A hard choice thus seems to confront the country which is situated in a vise between Russia and Germany. Can we of the United Nations ease it? Yes, if Russia would declare its position vis-a-vis Finland. We should seek to obtain some such declaration from Moscow in helping Finland make the right—i. e., a United Nations—choice. This is to not to try to cut the supply route on the Murmansk-Leningrad Railroad. If Finland, however, elects to move out of her own territory to cut it, we must take action. Specifically, we must regard Finland as having done Hitler's bidding. Thus Finland's war cannot be isolated. The friends of Finland, who are legion, will hope that she will take the risks—and there are risks—in holding back in the crucial days ahead.

Shakespeare At Camp

"That louse Macbeth," in the words of a seasoned sergeant, took over at Fort Meade the other day, and the men filled the house and liked it. Maurice Evans, who played the role, said he was "much encouraged in my belief that serious drama can be presented in the camps." The remarks of young men coming into Washington are an indication that Mr. Evans is right. One might go further and say that the boys would welcome other types of serious diversion, too. Early Army morale ventures, such as the employment of new cooks, the presentation of vaudeville shows, etc., were appreciated. But our citizen army don't want merely to be entertained. Witness the number of them to be seen in the art galleries in Washington of a Sunday, at musical performances, and at serious lectures. We are apt to forget that the soldiers have the same interests as they had in civilian life. An extreme example is the young British tank officer who entertained Harold Denny of the New York Times during the Libyan campaign by talking about his study of Egyptian archeology while on leave near Cairo. We have already commented editorially on the many soldier entries in a poetry contest and the quality of the mural exhibitions held in nearby camps. The response to Elizabethan drama shows again that Army morale officials were right in this experiment in more than superficial entertainment.

WINGS

Muriel lived while wings in England
Flickered like flowers above the grass,
Dragon-flies bright on singing water,
Robins awing where she would pass,
White-feathered angels prayer-time promised,
Keeping quite safe a child at play . . .
Wings for beauty and wondering laughter,
Innocent, gleaming, swiftly gay;

Muriel's world was gentle waking,
Smooth-brushed curls and a blue-sashed dress,
Windows watching the daisied meadows,
Hands all safety and gentleness;
Play and lessons till twilight falling,
Age-old church-bells' unshattered chime,
Bread-and-milk and a soft voice singing,
Sleep unbroken till waking-time.

Muriel went with peace around her,
Time for tending and gentle loss,
Time to cover with planted roses
That small grave with its broken cross . . .
Last bright spring for a child's free laughter,
Last wide windows where stars showed bright . . .
Muriel lived while wings in England
Only lifted in lovely flight.

Misplaced Taxes

It is noted that in revising the tax structure it is contemplated to again give married couples great advantages in exemptions as compared to single people and unload the heaviest burdens of taxation on the shoulders of the single who have always carried them. At present the burden of taxation in the lower brackets falls on single, unmarried women, which is not fair. The way things are now, those in the lower brackets are the ones who really pay most of the taxes, as the upper brackets can afford to hire attorneys to point the way to avoid payment of just taxes. The single people have no one in committee room to defend them as the taxmakers are all married themselves, so they pass laws to favor the married and unload the heaviest tax burdens on the shoulders of the defenseless single people. It is a case of the persecution of the minority or might over right which seems to rule the world today. We single people are at present carrying unbearable tax burdens and have more than we can manage.

We often hear the cry that the money for the war has to be raised somehow. Let those pay who are making money out of the war, those who are making vast fortunes manufacturing war materials, or raise funds by the levying of a general sales tax, and not by turning to the defenseless wage earners who are already working long hours overtime and struggling to make ends meet on barely a living wage.

I am not an admirer of former President Hoover and never was, but one statement he made in a recent speech is worthy of thought. He said he knew many things happened during his administration that were criticized, but one thing he never did, he never stooped to the meanest of all things that of forcing the withholding of dollars from the pay envelopes of wage earners already staggering under tax burdens that break the camel's back.

Why Wait?

Our Generals Marshall and Somervell have indicated that we are ready to take the offensive on a Western Front. What are we waiting for?

The peoples of the United Nations have learned only too well the bitter lessons of this war. Time after time they have seen the tragic consequences of the policy of defensive, of "too little and too late." The whole democratic world wants an offensive move for victory this year!

Hitler will not conquer America if she does not conquer herself by delay and timidity.

Length Of The War

Not a single red-blooded American has any confidence whatever in the men in Washington who are supposed to represent Americans and American ideals. Why all these "executive warnings" not to be "overconfident." Is it a fact that Roosevelt and the gang he has now organized want this war to last 10 or 12 years, when it can be won this year? Have he and the others set their heads that this war will not be won this year? Why so much time devoted to "old tires," "sugar," "cutting off cuffs on pants," "build a pipe line from Texas to East," etc.? The only ones living in our United States who do not know we are in a war are our so-called representatives in Washington, D. C. I am 62 and, regardless of all the newspaper and magazine "polls," I know 99 per cent of true-blue Americans hate the way Washington representatives are failing in their duty to devote their time to winning this war. Back China with 5000 bombers this week and it can be done, or our representatives are not worthy of our confidence.

Red Cross And The Foreign Born

The Washington Post of Monday, May 25, published a letter to the editor entitled "Foreign Born," signed by Maria Haidar (Mme. Bey M. Haidar) which made certain serious misstatements concerning the American Red Cross.

Madame Haidar made two charges, both entirely false, against the Red Cross: First, that loyal aliens were barred from Red Cross work and, second, that "the American Red Cross follows this policy of discrimination even against loyal American citizens because of foreign origin, although a great percentage of its contributions are made by the foreign-born element of our country."

To show the absurdity of any charge that loyal aliens are barred from Red Cross work one has only to know the names of various units working regularly on surgical dressings for men of America's armed forces, at Red Cross headquarters, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. There are Greek, Norwegian, British, French and Latin-American units. In general these are led by the wives of the diplomatic representatives from the nations mentioned. In the groups are included Australians, Canadians, Czechs, Yugoslavs, Finns, New Zealanders, Free French and Vichy French.

At the Walsh House it has been found necessary to have signs in Spanish as well as English, so enthusiastic are our neighbors of Latin America in their Red Cross work there.

As for the barring of "loyal American citizens because of foreign origin," it should be sufficient to point out that Otto S. Lund, chapter manager, was born in Sweden and came to the United States at the age of 15. No loyal American citizen is barred from Red Cross work because of foreign origin.

There are certain services of the Red Cross which work very closely with the armed forces of the United States. For these certain few corps, of which Nurses' Aides is one, the Red Cross necessarily requires that members must be American citizens. There is no regulation about the origin of those citizens, however. And to keep the record straight, let me reiterate that this regulation governing specified corps does not apply to all Red Cross work. As noted above, there is a definite place for non-citizens in the Red Cross program. There is "no race, no creed, no color" in the Red Cross.

We regret the necessity of having to answer such an unfortunate letter. May I respectfully suggest that since the "Letters-to-the-Editor" column in many papers is being used for propaganda purposes by elements unfriendly to this country, that it might be well to adopt a policy of verification of such statements as these made about the Red Cross. Such a policy of verification might involve extra effort, but it would prevent the publication of untrue statements made in good faith and, more important, would close at least one avenue of subversive propaganda.

EARL NASH,

Washington, May 28.

Although Mr. Nash chooses to accuse your paper of ignorance of facts and tries to vilify my character and loyal motives by unethical insinuations, he will not be able to deny actual facts. He can scarcely expect to be able to sustain the same accusations against Mrs. Roosevelt and the distinguished speakers at the last annual conference of the National Council on Naturalization and Citizenship, which met at the Hotel Astor, New York City, on May 1. If Mr. Nash was as well informed as those he blames for their lack of information and misstatements, he would have known that the New York press reported at length the discussion of discrimination practiced by the Red Cross against loyal and friendly aliens, eager to join in Red Cross activities, which was one of the topics of this conference. In maintaining this statement made in my letter published in The Post on May 25, I find myself in the best of company when it comes to veracity, intelligence and civic-mindedness.

As to the second "misrepresentation" claimed by Mr. Nash, it is a well-known fact, openly admitted by some officials, that applicants for paid positions, who are loyal citizens and well qualified, have been turned down because of foreign birth.

When a friend of mine during a visit to a Red Cross official at National Headquarters recommended me for work with the section charged with tracing relatives in foreign countries (the inefficiency of which was arousing strong criticism at the time), his answer was that my "appointment was impossible because the board would not approve on grounds of foreign birth."

This prevailing policy was also admitted to me personally by a member of the staff and justified in this way: "We only follow the policy of the Government." When a member of the public information department kindly recommended me for the same position and sent me with a personal note to the chief of personnel, I was turned down, although highly qualified.

I know that diplomatic and other volunteer groups cooperate with the D. C. Chapter. Obviously, the Red Cross accepts the money and free services of everyone without discrimination. But this does not refute my statement that well qualified and loyal foreign born citizens are barred from salaried jobs.

MARIA HAIDAR.

Washington, June 5.

Editor's Note: The National Red Cross, which The Post called before publication of Mrs. Haidar's original letter, substantially verified her claims.

The Post Impressionist

Leonora Speyer

Perhaps not many who love her poems know that Leonora Speyer, winner of the Pulitzer prize for poetry in 1926, is the same person who distinguished herself as a child prodigy violinist playing with the Georgetown Amateur Orchestra a number of years ago. She was then Nona Von Stosch.

Being one of those rare artists whose shoulder has been tapped by two different Muses, she is known among musicians as a violinist of note and by poetry lovers as a poet of distinction. And not often have the twain met.

It was when she was a little girl, living on Dumbarton Avenue in Georgetown that she first won renown as a violinist. Her teacher, Professor Burneys, at that time conductor of the Georgetown Amateur Orchestra, after having her as a pupil a year, placed her among the second violins (all adult musicians) on the program of one of the concerts in old Curtis Hall on O Street, she then being 9 years old.

In a letter she tells us, "It created such a stir—that little girl among the gray beards—that I appeared only once. I remember vaguely they objected to Burney 'using the orchestra to advertise his teaching.' At any rate, I did not play in the orchestra again to my great indignation!"

Evidently she means that she did not play with them again at that period, for a Washington newspaper a few years later reported a concert given by the same orchestra in which she was soloist, saying, "The gem of the evening was the playing of Nona Stosch, violin pupil of Professor Kaspar. Her wonderful attack, her exquisite bowing, her musicianly phrasing left nothing to be desired by the most critical."

Her mother was Julia Thompson of New England and her father, Count Ferdinand von Stosch, had come from Prussia to fight with the Union forces in the Civil War, later becoming a United States citizen. One of her poems recently published in the New York Times, "The Day That Will Live in Infamy," reveals that in her mother's family, too, there were fighters of naval battles.

I heard the war-drum in my side,
I listened . . . and a thousand feet
(Deep, deep within) were stirring there;
My mother's mother's mother's sons
Were stepping to its beat.

And ships were riding mightily
Upon a tide I seemed to know;
It was the sea lanes of my blood.
My mother's mother's mother's sons
Were its warm ebb and flow.

In her Georgetown home love of music predominated above all other interests and the little family was a strong cultural influence in their circle of many friends.

After the death of Nona's father, Mrs. von Stosch married Colonel Schayer who fully shared her love of music. To help an elderly violinist known as Professor Mueller, Mrs. Schayer organized a children's dancing class under his leadership. They met in the dingy old ballroom of what was then called "The Seminary" on Washington Street (in Civil War days, Miss English School for Young Ladies) now the Colonial Apartments on Thirtieth Street. Here Professor Mueller, fiddle held at his side, first demonstrated the steps, then fiddle raised to his shoulder, lifted the hearts and heels of his small pupils with his inspiring music, himself dancing around the ballroom while he played.

Mrs. Schayer had her own original ideas of little girls' proper dress. In the days of straight, tight-fitting coats, Nona and her sister, Minna, were dressed quite differently from other children in Georgetown. Nona with heavy blond hair hanging free and Minna, whose two dark braids hung long behind her, wore full loose cut coats fashioned after Kate Greenaway with quaint bonnets fur-trimmed. To some fashion conformists, these were strange costumes, but those who knew beauty of line and color saw truly charming pictures made by these two small children in their own garden or on the cobblestone streets of the town.

While Nona was in grammar school her long summer days were spent chiefly with her violin. And woe to the neighborhood boys who hung in her dining room window while she practiced, plaguing her, as boys will, trying to divert her attention from her fiddle to themselves. She would turn her back on their banter, but when her mother's voice from upstairs would call, "Nona, send those boys away," she would charge upon them with threatening gesture of her bow and drive them off.

She was only 15 years old when Professor Kaspar, recognizing her gift as unusual, urged her parents to send her abroad to study, and accordingly she soon went to the Conservatory of Brussels, where she worked hard for two years, winning the highest award for violin playing at the end of her second year. Later she went on to Paris for further instruction and finishing.

Eighteen years old, she returned to Georgetown, and when her friends heard that she was to make her debut as a soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Nikisch's conducting, they crowded the ticket office for seats. After that, Georgetown could no longer hold her. She toured the United States in concert and later appeared in various cities in Europe.

Her marriage to Sir Edgar Speyer of London narrowed her audiences, for she left the concert stage, but both she and her husband drew around them gifted musicians from all parts of Europe.

Back in America since 1915, Leonora Speyer has dedicated her gifts to poetry and has had published several books of verse, but in laying aside her beloved violin, she wrote:

"Words for my fiddle now,
Abundance of goodly words:
My deft, my dear,
My witty one,
With your brave answer ready,
My box of birds,
Crony and hearty,
Winged hubbub,
Tool—
And tear,
Fiddle, fiddle,
To leave you lying here!"

The Radek Treason Trial

Moscow, February 17, 1937.

Excerpts From Report to the Secretary of State
The Radek Treason Trial (January 23-30).
Strictly Confidential.

SIR: I have the honor to report the following with respect to the recent so-called Trotsky-Radek treason trial.

This trial was the outgrowth of the Kirov murder of December 1, 1934. Kirov was one of the prominent party leaders of the Stalin government located in the Leningrad area, and his murder created a sensation. The dispatches to the department at that time indicated that Stalin himself and other heads of the government hastened personally to the scene of the crime, apparently apprehensive that there was a widespread conspiracy to overthrow the Stalin government. The Kamenev-Zinoviev trial, when 16 defendants were arraigned, found guilty, and subsequently shot, was the outgrowth of that incident. The present trial finds its origin in the same source and by reason of revelations made at the trial and upon alleged evidence subsequently discovered.

JOSEPH E. DAVIES

The defendants in the present trial were 17 in number consisting of five or six prominent political leaders. The others were of no particular prominence. The indictment charged treason against the country, espionage, sabotage, and generally the execution of terroristic activities.

To appraise this situation, it should be borne in mind that practically all of the principal defendants were bred from early youth in an atmosphere of conspiracy against established order. As intellectuals they had conspired against the Tsar in their youth, in their university days, and had daily faced death "on the doorstep" because of their activities up to the time of the success of the Revolution. Conspiracy was bred in the bone.

AFTER THE death of Lenin in 1924, a struggle developed among the leaders for the succession. The two outstanding contenders were Trotsky and Stalin. The latter, as secretary of the Communist Party, slowly built up his party machine which resulted in the defeat of Trotsky and his final banishment in 1927. During this entire period Trotsky had drawn to himself a very large number of enthusiastic adherents among the leaders in the party. These men, upon his downfall, were sent into the interior and deprived of their places in government officialdom. Some few later recanted, were taken back into the party, and were again given official position. Always, however, the cloud of suspicion hung over them. Such men were the six principal defendants.

It should also be borne in mind that it was Stalin who projected the five-year plan in 1929 after Trotsky's banishment. During 1931 and 1932, when it was alleged the conspiracy originated, these plans were imposing terrific hardships upon the population. The results of the plans only began to indicate their possible successful fulfillment in 1934 and 1935. This improvement in the situation is referred to many times in the course of the testimony of the principal defendants as justification for their change of heart and final reasons for repentance and confession.

THE TRIAL

I ATTENDED the trial, which lasted six days, assiduously. It was terrific in its human drama.

Each of the defendants arose in his place in response to a question from the chief justice and pleaded guilty. The prosecutor asked but comparatively few questions and each defendant then gave a chronological narrative of his criminal activities.

There was nothing unusual in the appearance of the accused. They all appeared well nourished and normal physically. For the first few days of the trial they manifested considerable curiosity as to the crowd, and, while serious, did not seem to be much concerned. As the trial wore on, however, there became more evidence of despair in their positions—holding their heads in their hands or bowing their heads upon the rail.

The principal defendants were Pyatakov, Radek, Sokolnikov, Serebryakov, and Muralov. Pyatakov was the first witness and looked like a college professor delivering a lecture. He was the assistant people's commissar for heavy industry; was reputedly largely responsible for the success of the five-year plan. As he proceeded (as was the case with the others), his testimony would be interrupted by the prosecutor who called upon different defendants to corroborate the certain specific instances which he described. In some cases they modified or disputed some fact but in the main would corroborate the fact that the crime was committed. All this was done by these defendants with the greatest degree of nonchalance. I noted particularly that after Serebryakov was called to his feet to corroborate the fact of a peculiarly horrible crime (which he did laconically), he sat down quite unconcerned and yawned.

REASONS FOR PLOT

RADEK, the second defendant to be called, was quite a different type (short and stocky but with an aggressive and brilliant personality), and rather dominated the courtroom. He was dressed like a peasant and his personality was accentuated by a fringe of whiskers underneath his chin. He had several sharp colloquies with the prosecutor and did not come off second best.

Serebryakov was as mild-mannered a pirate as ever slit a throat (with a cherubic face), who casually recited horror after horror which he had projected. He seemed more or less resigned in his demeanor.

Sokolnikov, former Ambassador to London, assistant people's commissar for foreign affairs, was quite a different type, with a round face, swarthy, and high forehead. He delivered himself of what might appear to be a dispassionate lecture upon his participation in the conspiracy, and expounded logically and clearly the reasons which prompted him and his associates to launch upon a plot with Japan and Germany; the basis of which was that there was no possibility of projecting their plans for the betterment of the Russian people internally because the Stalin government was so strong that mass action within could not overthrow it and that historically they had reason to believe that their best chance was to rise to power through a foreign war and to create a smaller state out of the embers, because of the friendly disposition of the victors (Germans), and the probable attitude of other western powers of Europe in the resultant peace arrangements.

MURALOV was a soldierly looking man with a goatee, a shock of gray hair, and fine acquiline features. He had at one time been in position of high command in the military forces in Moscow. There were many indicia of truth speaking in the natural manner in which he told of his reasons for supporting Trotsky and again when he spoke of his reasons for refusal to confess, and ultimate recantation. He stated that for eight months he had refused to confess because he resented his arrest and became angry and stubborn, but that he had finally concluded that the Stalin government had made much progress and was doing such great things for the Russian people that he had been mistaken, and that his duty lay in making a clean breast of the plot.

All defendants seemed eager to heap accusation upon accusation upon themselves—mea culpa maxima. They required little cross-examination by the prosecutor. In the case of one defendant the prosecutor had even to admonish him to get down to the case and not embroider his testimony with additional crimes.

The defendants were all adjudged guilty and sentenced according to the degree of crime. Pyatakov, Serebryakov and Muralov were sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment.

GENERAL COMMENTS

THE MOST extraordinary part of this trial, from a western outlook, is that there should have been such a trial at all. The accused had all entered the plea of guilty. There remained nothing for a court to do but to hear possible pleas for clemency and to sentence the accused. But here a so-called trial was had which lasted for six days—from our point of view, an entirely useless proceeding.

There were probably two purposes for this program on the part of the authorities. Off the record, one is admitted, to wit: that the occasion was dramatized for propaganda purposes. It was designed: first, as a warning to all existing and potential plotters and conspirators within the Soviet Union; second, to discredit Trotsky abroad; and third, to solidify popular national feeling in support of the government against foreign enemies—Germany and Japan.

The other probable purpose was to disclose to the public in open court the bona fides of the confessions of the accused. Had these confessions been made "in chambers," or produced over the signatures of the accused, their authenticity might have been denied.

Naturally I must confess that I was predisposed against the credibility of the testimony of these defendants. The unanimity of their confessions, the fact of their long imprisonment (incommunicado) with the possibility of duress and coercion, all gave me grave doubts. Viewed objectively, however, and based upon my experience in the trial of cases and the application of the tests of credibility which past experience had afforded me, I arrived at the reluctant conclusion that the state had established its case. I am impressed with the many indications of credibility which obtained in the course of the testimony. To have assumed that this proceeding was invented and staged as a project of dramatic political fiction would be to presuppose the creative genius of a Shakespeare and the genius of a Belasco in stage production.

THE HISTORICAL background and surrounding circumstances also lend credibility to the testimony. The circumstantial detail, apparently at times surprising even to the prosecutor as well as to other defendants, which was brought out by the various accused, gave unintended corroboration to the gist of the charges.

The manner of testifying of various accused and their bearing on the stand also had weight with me. The old general, Muralov, was particularly impressive. In his "last plea" he said:

"I refuse counsel and I refuse to speak in my defense because I am used to defending myself with good weapons and attacking with good weapons. I have no good weapons with which to defend myself . . . I don't dare blame anyone for this; I, myself, am to blame. This is my difficulty. This is my misfortune . . ."

On the face of the record in this case it would be difficult for me to conceive of any court, in any jurisdiction, doing other than adjudging the defendants guilty. I have talked to many, if not all, of the members of the Diplomatic Corps here and, with possibly one exception, they are all of the opinion that the proceedings established clearly the existence of a conspiracy to overthrow the government.

Physicians Face Draft

McNutt's Ultimatum

Special Dispatch to The Post

Atlantic City, June 8.—In startlingly harsh and unequivocal terms, War Man Power Chief Paul V. McNutt tonight told the American Medical Association that its voluntary program for meeting the medical needs of the armed services and war industries was a failure and that unless a remedy was forthcoming "soon," some "more vigorous plan"—presumably drafting of doctors—would have to be invoked.

"The plain fact and conclusion is simply this," McNutt declared in a prepared address: "The Army and Navy and the war industry areas have not gotten the doctors they need. The careful safeguards that were set up by the A. M. A. Procurement and Assignment Service have apparently slowed down the rate of recruitment (of doctors). The voluntary plan must work and work promptly—or some other more vigorous plan will have to be produced."

McNutt told the gathering that the armed forces needed 5000 more young doctors by the end of this month and 20,000 more by the end of the year. The older practioners must not only stay at home "but must extend the scope of their activities to meet the medical needs of civilian communities," he said.

"Slightly over 3000 physicians, who were not obligated by reserve commissions, volunteered in the first six months of this war," McNutt said. "By contrast, 12,000 volunteered in the first six months of the last war."

HE ADDED that the Army and Navy Medical Corps ratios indicated the armed forces will require one-third of all our physicians, even including retired men, or two-thirds of all doctors under the age of 45.

Agreeing in part with McNutt's criticism, Dr. Fred W. Rankin, incoming president of the A. M. A., admitted that American doctors "share a responsibility for the fact that a sufficient number of physicians of proper ages and capacity to care for the rapidly increasing needs of an expanding Army has not been forthcoming."

Dr. Rankin, however, contended that more than 5000 physicians and surgeons had joined the Army and Navy in the first six months of the war, and insisted that a movement was already under way to bring physicians out of retirement and back into active ranks to fill the place of younger men who have entered the armed services.

Hundreds of retired physicians are volunteering to return to practice, he said, and are doing remarkable service not only in private work but also in incidental military duty when called on.

TURNING to the problem of medical readjustments in war industry areas, McNutt said:

"There is yet far too little consciousness of any problem beyond that of obtaining physicians for the Army and Navy. The acute need for civilian service is not yet appreciated. . . . The community that is growing, as some communities have from rambling rural villages of 1000 people to towns of 30,000 and 40,000 and 50,000, must be taken care of. Doctors will have to be assigned to them on a voluntary basis, or on some other basis."

Indicating that he still expected the A. M. A. to handle the problem, but that if it failed stronger measures would be applied, McNutt concluded:

"Yours is an important profession. It is the first to require rationing—rationing which will make sure that there are enough doctors to meet the needs of every unit of the home front and the battle front. The issue is, Who shall do the rationing?"

Earlier in the day, Dr. Frank H. Lahey of Boston, retiring president, told the opening meeting of the house of delegates, ruling body of the A. M. A., that the present war may reverse current criticism of the medical profession.

THE BOSTON physician indirectly struck out at Thurman Arnold and other United States Government officers who a year ago prosecuted the association for violation of the Sherman anti-Trust Law and obtained a verdict of guilty on the grounds that it was a monopoly acting in restraint of trade. The case has since been appealed but no action on this appeal has yet been taken.

Dr. Lahey asked members of the association to forget this controversy because "the United States Government has placed its complete trust in medicine in one of the greatest danger periods it has ever faced." Today's obligation, he added, is first to take care of the men and women who may be wounded abroad and at home.

"The critics of medicine who have accused us of decadence are eyeing this important undertaking in this dangerous period with very great interest. Its successful accomplishment will do more to give medicine an authoritative voice in post-war developments relative to possible changes in medicine than any other thing which medicine can do."

He added that the war work of physicians may "make supporters out of one's critics."

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

What One Congressman Can Do

WHEN CONGRESSMAN George A. Paddock got his first glimpse of Washington's slums some months ago he was both amazed and conscience-stricken. He was amazed to find such wretched living conditions in a city which claims to be the center of the democratic world. He was conscience-stricken because he realized that the great legislative body of which he is a member is, in the last analysis, responsible for this condition.

PUSEY

Now, of course, Mr. Paddock has no personal responsibility for the filth, the disease, the crime and degraded social environment to be found in Washington's slums. He is not a member of the House District Committee or the Appropriations Committee. Moreover, he is a new Congressman now serving his first term. Naturally he is more interested in his home town of Evanston, Ill., than in Washington. The normal reaction would have been a mere shrugging of the shoulders at the disgusting conditions he saw and read about in the hidden alleys of the Capital City.

But Mr. Paddock did not shrug. Nor did he take it for granted that, since he is a first termer, he could do nothing about the Capital's disease incubators. First, he set out to learn something about the background of these slums and why they are left to menace the health of our key city in the midst of a great war effort. Then he decided to see for himself whether one member of Congress could make any progress toward cleaning them up.

Choosing an excellent place to start, he asked the Public Buildings Administration why the United States Government made a practice of renting rotten shacks to slum racketeers who used them for exploitation of the poor. His query brought the PBA face to face with the appalling consequences of its own carelessness. The practice of crowding broken-down hovels with a family in every room, regardless of their state of disrepair or lack of sanitary facilities, could not be defended. So a simple query was sufficient to bring from the PBA a pledge that the Government will clean up and repair its slum houses or withdraw them from the market.

Not content to attack the problem from one angle, Mr. Paddock began to inquire why the laws against overcrowding, filth, faulty plumbing and so forth are not effectively enforced. He got varying answers from different sources. The one fact that stood out was that violations of all standards of decency in housing are widespread. Finally he wrote to the Health Department for specific information. The reply he received in the form of a memorandum prepared by R. S. Wilson, acting director of the Bureau of Sanitary Inspection, is of more than passing interest.

Mr. Paddock asked: "How many inspectors are now investigating overcrowded and insanitary dwellings?"

Mr. Wilson replied: "One inspector is assigned full time to housing . . . one 75 per cent of time. . . . Twelve inspectors are doing this type of work 10 per cent of their time."

That gives the District about the equivalent of three full-time inspectors to see that the law is enforced in 6000 horrible shanties and about 14,000 other substandard dwellings. In other words, we have one sanitary housing inspector for every 275,000 residents. And most of these inspectors have never been trained for their jobs, and are now approaching—or have arrived at—old age. In these circumstances the hopelessness of the Health Department's problem is obvious.

IN PREPARING his 1943 budget, Health Officer Ruhland asked for two public health engineers, two junior engineers and eight additional inspectors to correct this disgraceful failure of local government in the Nation's Capital. The Commissioners trimmed his request to five inspectors, and the House cut the number to two. Fortunately the Senate restored the five inspectors requested by the city fathers, but even if no further compromise is made that will leave the inspection division pitifully short-handed in the face of a truly gigantic task.

Mr. Paddock asked if the inspectors have legal power to order dwellings vacated when they become dangerous to health. The answer is that the Health Department does not have such power. The Board for Condemnation of Insanitary Buildings may close a disease-breeding hovel, if it is bad enough, in a minimum of 60 days. The average time required for these complicated proceedings, however, has proved to be six months.

Mr. Paddock learned also that responsibility for inspection of insanitary dwellings is divided without reason or consistency among the building inspectors, the Health Department, the plumbing inspectors and the Water Department. Passing the buck between these agencies is a favorite game that often makes a farce out of law enforcement. In one recent case a single room had been partitioned so as to convert it into three tiny rooms. Since the center room had no windows whatever, the law had clearly been violated. The Bureau of Sanitary Inspection reported that the occupants could be forced to move. There would be little point in putting them out, however, since the place could be rented the next day to other tenants without removal of the illegal partitions. This brought the building inspectors into the picture. But they reported that they could not force removal of the partition unless proof as to who had put it up could be found. And so the process of ducking responsibility goes merrily on, and will continue to go on until some one competent official is given the job of making a cleanup.

To concentrate authority for enforcement of the law against slum racketeers is the purpose of the Washington Housing Association's housing code bill now before both the House and Senate. That bill is a mandate to the District Commissioners to adopt a modern housing code with adequate standards as to light, sanitation, floor space, and so forth. Its importance can scarcely be overemphasized at a time when the vast influx of war workers is intensifying congestion in the slums. Washington can doubtless absorb the newcomers, assuming that a large-scale residential construction program is carried out. But the dangers of so much congestion will be great indeed unless minimum standards of decency are upheld in the slum areas where overcrowding always becomes most acute. A housing code has been urgently needed for years. Now it appears to be a real necessity.

Representative Paddock was helpful also in getting the housing-code bill before Congress. Chief credit for this progressive step goes to the Washington Housing Association. And the bill has been introduced by Chairmen McCarran and Randolph of the Senate and House District Committees. Undoubtedly they will assume the leadership in pushing it through to enactment. Nevertheless, Mr. Paddock has given us an encouraging example of what a new Congressman can do for the voteless Capital when he puts his mind to it. Incidentally, his good work suggests how great would be the usefulness of one or two District Congressmen sitting with their colleagues from the States.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Privileged To Rob

PERHAPS you never thought you would live to see the day when a gang of extortioners, some of them broken-English foreigners, and many of them underworld crooks, would be turned loose in your own, your native land, in time of war against the most dangerous enemy in American history, with your Government's implied, but effective, permission to rob American workers of from $20 to $50, each, as the price of permission to work on war jobs to back up the Army and Navy, but brother you have seen it.

You have seen many such days since the patriotic people of the United States realized their country was up against war and ground was broken for the cantonments and powder plants, the factories and flying fields in a thousand localities from Eastport to San Diego.

The Hod-Carriers' Union, a licensed racket, operating under Government sanction and controlled by a gang of musclemen in a Washington headquarters who never were elected to any union office and held no convention in 30 years, has been prowling this free land from the day the program began, openly operating a plain shakedown.

POOR FARMERS and plainsmen, swamp-Yankees, hillbillies and mountaineers, croppers and odd-job men by the thousand have been held up by the collectors for this racket and compelled to pay for nominal membership in a union of evil reputation, long infested with some of the vilest criminals in the rogues' gallery, before they could be admitted to the works to earn a few dollars for their families.

Men who had not had pay-jobs outside the make-work and relief projects for years and who, naturally, needed every dollar they could earn were stuck up as ruthlessly as the victims of any hoist in a roadside beer joint and forced to hand over money that might better have gone for shoes or milk for the children.

This union is run by a self-elected and self-perpetuating gang of union racketeers who just sifted into the controlling offices at nobody's invitation but their own. The boss is Joseph V. Moreschi, formerly of Chicago, now of Washington, D. C., where he does business in the shadow of the Capitol Dome, which symbolizes in the lingering, infantile fancy of the American people, their constitutional freedom to work at any lawful occupation begging no man's permission.

MORESCHI was during the evil life of Mike Carrozzo, who was boss of 25 Chicago locals of the Hod-Carriers' Union, an intimate and cooperative colleague of that monstrous affront to every decent instinct. Mike had been in the brothel business on the south side with his noted fellow countryman, Jim Colosimo, that progressive magnate who introduced the chain-store methods to the vice trade.

Mike was so foul a rodent that even in Chicago, where his political connections and power were recognized, he was twice deterred from pressing his application for citizenship by intimations that he would be protested and turned down. He had an excellent racing stable and a great, modern farm on which he raised thoroughbred cattle and swine, and he died owing the Government of the country which had tolerated his crimes—done mainly in the sacred name of the labor movement—a quarter of a million dollars in income taxes, interest and penalties.

Carrozzo was only one of the vicious men who acquired power and wealth in this union. In the Pittsburgh area a brutal terrorist became a political boss through the power of the racket and in New York and St. Louis several others of similar low character robbed workingmen of their earnings and ruled them with club and gun.

This union has done nothing for any single workman in the entire war program that the workman could not have done for himself. The wages were set by contract with the Government and the union had nothing to do with the establishment of the rates. It would have been a shameful degradation of the Government if it had permitted such a racket to appear in negotiations as spokesmen for Americans seeking work on jobs for their country in war.

A year ago this racket, smoked out by publicity, held a meeting in St. Louis which purported to be a national convention, its first in 30 years. It was a fake convention in which the provisions of the so-called constitution for a secret vote were violated lest the delegates, most of them no better than the national officers, turn the musclemen out. And the few pages of figures which were submitted as an "accounting" of the dues and other tributes collected from many thousands of poor, pick-and-shovel toilers—many of them long since dead—in the course of the 30 years, was a hilarious burlesque.

But, brother, the Hod-Carriers' Union is a union just the same, with all the terrible powers and the rights to tax decent, loyal citizens and graft from them that your Government has awarded to all the unions.

Brother, you have lived to see the day.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Policy Made Clearer And Stronger

DURING this week's great military actions which have extended from Cologne to Midway, we have made a diplomatic move which may have seemed perfunctory and of little practical interest. Six months after Bulgaria, Hungary, and Rumania declared war upon us, we have recognized that we are at war with them. Yet our action is much more important than at first it may seem. It is important because it demonstrates that in his Memorial Day speech, Mr. Welles was not making utopian promises for the distant future, but was announcing a policy which is very seriously meant.

LIPPMANN

WHAT DIFFERENCE does it make whether we are or are not at war with these three states? It means primarily that not only for the war but for the period of the armistice and for the peace settlement which will follow we are now the allies of Greece and of Yugoslavia. Their enemies are now our enemies, and the words "United Nations" have very definite practical consequences.

For, as the State Department has announced through the Welles speech, we intend with the other victorious nations to disarm the nations which "may threaten aggression outside of their frontiers;" we intend to police the armistice; and we mean to regard the United Nations "as the nucleus of a world organization" to determine the final terms of peace.

The declarations of war with the three small Axis satellites followed immediately after Mr. Welles had announced this American policy. Therefore, Greece and Yugoslavia are now assured that their position at the armistice will be quite different from that of their neighbors who have gone with Hitler. Greece and Yugoslavia will take part in enforcing the armistice and they will belong to the original nucleus of the world organization which will write the peace. Hungary, Bulgaria, and Rumania will be disarmed to the degree deemed necessary to prohibit any renewal of aggression on their part, and they will have to prove that they can be trusted in a world of free nations.

THUS we have adopted the principle that the nations which fight our enemies are the nations we must work with from now on. We have tried the opposite principle: we have wished to believe that if we dealt with Hitler, his dupes and his Quislings did not matter. Hitler is still obviously the great enemy in Europe. But the dupes and the Quislings are an essential part of his power, and there is an immense practical difference now and for the future between nations like the Greeks and the Yugoslavs who have staked everything to resist him and nations like Bulgaria, Hungary, and Rumania, which work with him.

The Greeks and the Yugoslavs have fought for freedom. The others have not. Can there be any doubt that the Greeks and the Yugoslavs can, therefore, be relied upon more surely in the cause of freedom? Can there be any doubt that the others cannot be relied upon until they have proved by what they do to liberate themselves from Hitler and to purge themselves internally that they can be relied upon? Is this not sound sense? If we cannot make peace with Hitler and Mussolini, how can we make peace with their agents?

WE COME, thereby, to the tragic case of Finland, and we are bound to be governed by the fact that the Finnish government is in a position to strike a blow which, if it is successful, might prolong the war indefinitely and make it extremely difficult for us to defeat Japan and Germany. The Finns are on the flank of our main supply line to Russia. If they do anything to cut that line, they will do us the gravest injury in the Pacific as well as in the European theater of the war.

We should in sheer self-defense have to regard any action of this kind by Finland as an act of war against the United States, and there ought to be no doubt as to the consequences. If Finland goes to war with the United States, she will fall into the same class as Hungary, Bulgaria and Rumania when it comes to the armistice and to the making of the peace. She will have struck such a deadly blow at Russia, and through Russia at us, that it will be impossible for us to argue that Finland must not also be disarmed and demilitarized. We cannot, therefore, afford to let the Finnish people have the illusion that no matter what they allow their government to do to us, they can count on our protection. They cannot count on it if by their deeds they put us in a position where countless Americans, Russians, Britons and Chinese must die because they have yielded to Hitler. The dilemma of the Finns is tragic and it is hard. But the cause of freedom in the world is paramount.

THE UNITED NATIONS are a grand alliance which has come into being, not by virtue of a blueprint, but in the fires of war. The alliance was not formed as a diplomatic combination. It consists of the nations which, when attacked, chose to resist rather than to surrender. The common cause rests, therefore, not upon the plans or pledges of statesmen, but on the vital interest of each people. That is why this alliance must grow firmer and closer as the war moves towards its distant climax.

This is now the officially declared American policy. We can take pride and comfort in the accumulating evidence that the President and the State Department are coming by considered steps to so firm a program of action in the execution of this policy.

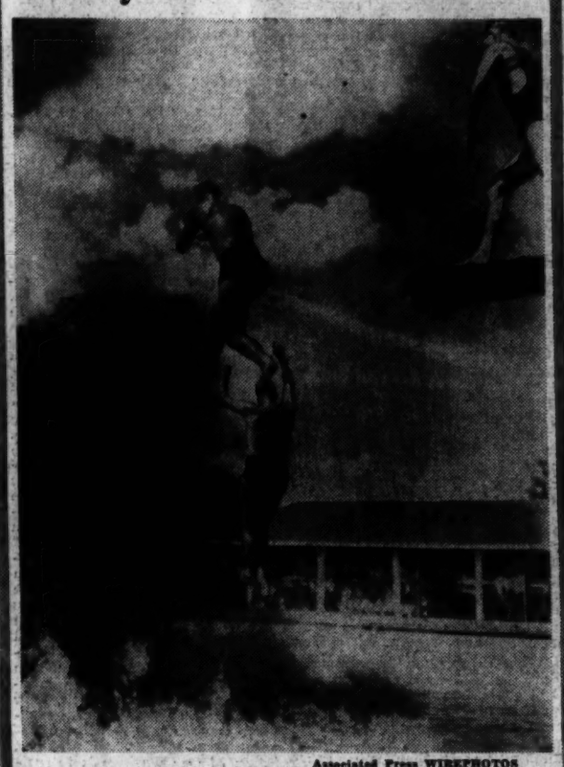
Navy Fire Swimmers



Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

IN HOT WATER—Three Navy officers (above), all expert swimmers, jump into flame-swept water of a swimming pool in final demonstrations to show that men can swim through burning oil and gasoline without injury. Forms of two of the officers (below, arrows) show through the flames as they bob up for a gulp of air. The underwater swimming technique will be taught students at the Navy's preflight training school when it opens Thursday in Athens, Ga., where this demonstration was given yesterday

Athens, Ga., June 8 (AP). The four trunk-clad Navy officers emerged dripping from the flame-swept swimming pool, glanced ruefully at the sun—and complained of its blistering heat.

The officers were giving the final test to the most spectacular swimming lesson to be taught at the U. S. Navy's preflight training school which opens at the University of Georgia Thursday—that men can swim through burning oil and gasoline and escape injury.

Lieut. W. F. Foster, chief swimming coach at the school, and former instructor at Southern Methodist University, termed the test "extremely satisfactory."

"It looks dangerous," he said, "but there's nothing to it except knowing how, and we've proved to ourselves that we know how. Our theories worked out perperfectly. Now if our cadets should at some future date be unfortunate enough to be blasted into an oil-covered sea, they'll know how to swim under water."

Before today's demonstration none of the four swimmers had ever tried the experiment. None had the slightest difficulty although each plunged in a dozen times or more. Their only complaints concerned their sun-reddened shoulders.

Those conducting the demonstration were Foster, Lieut. (jg.) Robert Tessier, former coach at the University of Idaho; Charles Jaskwhich, former University of Mississippi backfield coach, and Lieut. (jg.) S. J. Rees, former coach at Calvin Coolidge High School, Washington, D. C.

The demonstration by the four officers was no trick for publicity purposes. It's sole purpose is to teach men how to survive in this era of oil-driven ships and submarines.

The swimmer propels himself under the blazing oil until his lung-held oxygen supply is about exhausted. At this point he pushes hard for the surface and as he breaks water, slaps the flames away, takes a deep breath and sinks again.

The Navy, however, is not turning inexperienced swimmers loose to try their hands at swimming under blazing water. None but expert swimmers will be given this final test without protective clothing.

Police Morale 'Excellent,' Kelly Asserts

The morale in the Police Department was declared by Police Chief Edward Kelly last night to be "excellent." Patriotism and the inevitability of the draft were given by him as the only reasons for the increasing losses of Police Department personnel to the armed forces.

It had been reported last week that dissatisfaction with the Commissioners' and Kelly's attitude on the retirement law changes had caused many police officers to seek enlistment in the military services, particularly the Coast Guard.

Denying that either he or Police Commissioner John Russell Young had ever used "repressive measures" to keep men on the force, Kelly said:

"We can't stop any man from enlisting and we wouldn't want to if we could. If one of our men wants to fight for his country, we certainly would never try to prevent that."

He said that the 60 policemen and 30 firemen who had registered with the Coast Guard had been asked to "hold things up" until Young returns from New York on Wednesday.

"You wouldn't call that repressive, would you?" he said.

No request has been made for a blanket deferment of the police and fire services, Kelly said. This matter was discussed by the Commissioners and Kelly some months ago, when it was decided that each case should be disposed of individually.

"Of course it will handicap us to lose our trained men," Kelly said. "We have already lost 67 or 68 men, and many of the vacancies still stand. But we have no intention of trying to interfere with the Selective Service, nor with what any of our men thinks his patriotic duty."

Harry Lebowitz Of Mt. Rainier Dies; Rites Held

Funeral services for Harry Lebowitz, 64, who died yesterday at his home at 3817 Thirty-fourth Street, Mount Rainier, Md., were held in Baltimore, with Rabbi Solomon Metz of the Adas Israel Congregation of Washington officiating.

Mr. Lebowitz, who came to this country from Russia in 1909, was one of Mount Rainier's oldest inhabitants.

He was a member of the Westgate Lodge of the Masons, B'nai B'rith, Odd Fellows, Ohev Sholem Congregation of Washington, Adas Israel Congregation of Baltimore and Joseph Benjamin Congregation of Bladensburg.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Lebowitz; three sons, Simon and Louis Lebowitz, both of Mount Rainier, and Samuel Lebowitz, of the District, and a daughter, Mrs. Louis Lipstein, of Wilmington, Del.

Joint Returns

First Lady Accepts Tax With 'Grace'

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said yesterday she has accepted the Treasury Department's explanation of the need of joint income tax returns by husbands and wives with "perfect good grace" and will not grumble about having to pay more taxes as a result of it.

The First Lady, who has opposed the plan in principle, read her press conference a Treasury communication in which it was declared the ruling about joint returns took away none of the independence of the wife and in no way jeopardized "equal rights."

About nine out of each ten married couples have been filing joint returns, anyway, the communication said. According to the Treasury, the ruling represents the realistic approach to the family as an economic unit and is designed solely to bring in more money from sources that can afford it.

Questioned about her feeling in regard to the drafting of boys 18 and 19 years of age, Mrs. Roosevelt said she thought draft boards would need to be very careful in their physical examinations of such lads. "If they were physically mature and able I suppose I would be as willing to have a son of mine go to war at 18 as at 21. It is not easy at any time," she declared.

Mrs. Roosevelt verified reports that the President is seeking a "summer White House" nearer to Washington than Hyde Park is, but said she could not reveal the location. He will use the cottage for week-end and overnight visits when he is able to slip away from pressing duties, substituting these trips for former journeys to his mother's country estate and for cruises on the Potomac.

In her conference with members of the House and Senate District Committees last week, the First Lady said, she tried to plant the idea that something could be done to better conditions in Washington's institutions even if new construction could not be undertaken during the war. Programs and personnel could be enlarged, she said.

Mrs. Anna Beall Dies; Widow Of Army Officer

Mrs. Anne Mapp Beall, 66, widow of Lieut. Col. Fielder M. M. Beall, U. S. Army, of 6710 Brookville Road, Chevy Chase, Md., died unexpectedly yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital.

Mrs. Beall was born in Milledgeville, Ga. She had no children. Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Irving Walker of Atlanta, Ga., and two nieces, Mrs. Louis Young Dawson of Charleston, S. C., and Mrs. J. Lee Groves of Atlanta, Ga.

The funeral will be held in Arlington Cemetery tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Waiter Indicted for Perjury In Trial of Accused Sniper

The District grand jury yesterday indicted Herbert Ray, a waiter, for perjury in the trial of John E. Eklund, accused as the mysterious "sniper" slayer who terrorized Washington's Negro sections in the autumn of 1940. Eklund was convicted but recently won a new trial.

A total of 47 indictments were returned.

Assault with a dangerous weapon, Herman Coleman, Joseph Enright, Thomas Jones, William Lyons, Joseph A. Earley, Francis J. Greenfield and William A. Newman; unauthorized use of an automobile, James A. Howard, James C. Watkins, Robert L. Turner, James A. Randall, Harry Brady and Mervin P. Sammons; stealing automobile accessories, Daniel J. Vaughan and Nevitt Shacklett; grand larceny, James A. Reid, Mary M. Jones, Joseph W. Hoskins, James C. Roy, Joseph L. Washington, Raymond L. Carter, William N. Evans and Clyde T. Morphis; unauthorized use of an automobile and grand larceny, Adam C. Baker; larceny after trust and grand larceny, Clifton Bradford.

Housebreaking and larceny, Clarence L. Minor, Rhosie T. Brown, Kenneth Willis and Thomas Dent, Jr.; robbery, Milton H. Fisher, Victor L. Williams, Edgar Lee Morgan, Ernest A. Morgan, Frank Smith and Gilbert Davis; embezzlement, Irene Wilen; assault with intent to commit rape, George W. Butt; second degree murder, Ernest Jones; carnal knowledge, Jack H. W. Beasley and William Fields.

Violations of the gambling laws, Marguerite E. Morgan, Claude L. Horton, Elsie O. Stille, Robert Noland, Sam Bartnick, Russel W. Jackson, Annie Jackson, Michael Brunetto, Fred Wilson, Alexander Ingram, Richard Knox and Louise E. Wells.

The grand jury ignored the cases of Gordon Phillips, Paul J. Barton, Willie Butler, Lucille Belton, Lawrence Hinson and Janis Jacobs.

Ending Slavery Held Big Task Of America

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 8.—The great task now confronting America, the Christian Science board of directors today told thousands attending the annual meeting of the mother church, is "to aid in working out the freedom of the whole world from slavery."

During the meeting, at which Mrs. Elizabeth F. Norwood of Brookline, Mass., was chosen president of the mother church for the coming year, the board of lectureship reported that the "welding together of the two great democracies (of Britain and the United States) . . . is the consummation of the fond hopes of all Christian Scientists."

The lectureship board reported that the establishment of Christian Science in some countries was being limited by the dictators, that some churches and institutions were being closed and confiscated.

"But," the board added, "wherever multitudes of plain people in ordinary everyday living cherish and practice the truths of their religion, its resurrection is assured."

The incoming president, whose chief duty is to preside at the annual meeting, said that the times appeared to constitute a challenge to members of the denomination to face unflinchingly "a duty beyond anything they have ever before been called up to face."

Mrs. Norwood is the daughter of Isaac Paul Gragg, honored for gallantry in the Civil War, and of Eldora O. Gragg, one of 12 students chosen by Mary Baker Eddy

Broken Gas Main Gives Firemen Task

A broken gas main caused a brief 12-foot blaze and provided a hot half hour for District firemen and emergency gas squad workers at Eleventh and H Streets Northeast late yesterday afternoon.

Exact cause of the flareup was not determined, but police believed that a crane, working a few yards away, had severed the main.

Streetcars on H Street were tied up for several blocks, but otherwise damage was slight.

Share-Your-Car Program To Make New Friends, Mrs. George C. Thorpe Says

By Genevieve Reynolds

GASOLINE rationing has its compensations. Soon the lonely little woman from the States, who yearns to borrow a cup of vinegar or flour from her next door neighbor, will throw city customs aside and barge in. Furthermore, she'll be able to chat to her heart's content. All this will be the result of the share your car plan, according to Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the Woman's Safety Committee of the American Automobile Association.

Mrs. Thorpe

In fact, members of the Women's Safety Committee are organizing their immediate neighborhoods to share transportation. As soon as a complete survey has been made, the report will be turned over to Van Henyning of the D. C. Traffic Department in order to be coordinated with general plans for the District.

To start the ball rolling, Mrs. Thorpe is inviting the residents of the Wyoming Avenue area to meet with her this week. She will speak before members of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, Thursday morning at 11:30 a. m., 522 Sixth Street Northwest. Her topic will be "Share Your Car."

Mrs. Thorpe has outlined her plan to Mrs. P. C. Ellett, president of the District of Columbia Parent-Teacher Association. Local P.-T. A. groups are working out methods of taking the children to and from playgrounds this summer and back and forth to school next winter. The idea is for each mother to take turns at carrying not only her children but as many more as she can pile into her car.

"This sharing your car with your neighbors in the block, has great psychological advantages as well as practical ones," explained Mrs. Thorpe yesterday. Not only will it erase a lot of loneliness, but it will create lasting friendships among people who otherwise might never meet."

There's also a romantic side to the picture. Mrs. Thorpe thinks that quite a few girls may meet potential husbands in the block, when the share-your-car becomes really effective.

"But practically," she explained, "it will bring a greater united war effort, save gasoline, tires and get the children to playground and schools, and mothers to market, to club meetings and a few parties."

INSTALLATION of new officers and the inspection of prospective new members were the double reasons for Junior Alliance's gala luncheon yesterday at the home of Mrs. Albert W. Davis, 3808 Argyle Terrace Northwest. Assistant hostesses were Mrs. Cliff Y. Stephens and Mrs. Roland Dulin.

Mrs. Carlton C. Druffus was installed as president for the ensuing year and Mrs. Glen Spitler as first vice president. Other officers taking the oath of office included: Mrs. Battle Bowman, second vice president; Mrs. Dean Snyder, third vice president; Mrs. Albert C. Lance, treasurer, and Mrs. William C. Famous Collection of Fans To Go on Display Thursday

"Snuff and the fan supply each pause of chat with singing, laughing, ogling and all that."

So runs an old-time couplet by Alexander Pope, popular in the days when drawing room conversation was indeed an art.

Milady knew her fan etiquette in gay colonial days. There was an extensive language of the fan. Coquetry was carried on with it.

And if fans could talk, what inside bits of history might be revealed by the collection of fans to be exhibited beginning Thursday in the museum of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Memorial Continental Hall.

Some of these fans, by their shapes and colors, suggest courtship and romance; others politics and intrigue. A gentle waving of a fan might have meant fame and fortune to one, the mere click of a fan disappointment and sorrow to another.

The exhibit, which also includes a very unusual display of miniatures, has been arranged by Miss Helen Johnson, secretary of the museum, under the direction of Mrs. C. Edward Murray of Trenton, N. J., curator general. It will be open to the public and will continue from Thursday to September 17. Regarding it, Mrs. Murray said:

"The exhibit shows some of the dignity and courtliness of our forebears. It is one of a series of special exhibits presented by the D. A. R. Museum designed to interpret American life in early days."

The fans are of many different kinds and materials. Some are very elaborate. Some have interesting histories.

As for the miniatures, these dainty portraits painted on ivory or carved on wax together with silhouettes, were a fad of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. Painters used ivory because it gave the most lifelike skin tones.

Many artists who worked so meticulously on a 2-inch portrait head filled in the time between orders by snipping out profiles with sharp-pointed scissors. Some of these silhouettes are indeed interesting. They show milady's hair-do and her tucker, while those of the men give an idea of the high collars and the ruffled shirt fronts of that period.

Miniatures by Charles Fraser and by Jean Baptiste Isabey, French artist of note, as well as silhouettes by James Peale and William Bache, are among the articles exhibited.

Make Staying At Home A Pleasure

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

MAYBE it will be a good thing to look homeward for more of our pleasures during the coming difficult years. Maybe it hasn't been too healthy for the family to get the idea that they had to gad off in the car to the next town or to the next State for their fun. Certainly we're all going to be staying home and spending much of what we have to spend on our homes, since home furnishings are about the last category of big goods left to the consumer to buy, what with automobiles, radios and appliances off the market. The situation makes current letters from our readers doubly interesting:

Mrs. Z. G. writes: "What color would you suggest for painting the furniture in a mans room? I can't seem to hit upon a really good masculine combination to go with a wine rug and a blue India print curtains and spread."

Beige Background

Beige is the color that comes to mind first. This would be very interesting with both the rug and the curtains—especially with the beige walls.

• • • •

Mrs. C. F. writes: "I have an extra room which I want to make into a guest room. At present the wide doorway leading into the living room has monks cloth portieres. Whatever I do here will be on view part of the time at least through the living room. I have an old-fashioned iron bed with a high back and footpiece and narrow iron rods. I also have a walnut dresser which is in good condition, but doesn't match the bed. I'd thought of cutting the headpiece of the bed down lower and slip-covering both head and foot with some figured material, using the same pattern for draperies and for a flounce around the bed. Or eliminating the headboard and using the lower footboard for the head. Would you use the same material for portieres or keep the monks cloth? Would these ideas for bed and draperies be practical?"

Congenial Materials

We'd leave the monks cloth portieres, though it might be interesting to line them on the bedroom side with the figured materials you select. Your ideas for slip-covering the bed in the same material as you use for flounce and draperies should be most effective. My only word of warning would be to be sure that the material is congenial with your decorations in the living room.

If the colors are harmonious you might even find it appealing to use the same design for one or more slip covers in the living room or even have the same draperies in both rooms. I would advise against a different patterned material in the living room in any case, though it would be all right to have plain draperies in one room and figured in the other.

Nail Polish Repair

A chip, mended in time saves a lot of nail polish, says Lucille Ball. Lucille loves long, tapering nails, but knows that the longer they are the more easily the polish chips. So she mends the first tiny break with a touch of polish, which saves removing the color and starting all over again. Saves both time and polish.

Coldly Self-Righteous Person Is on Defensive Against Unacknowledged Weakness Within Himself, Says Woman, Apropos of 'Distressed Husband' Case

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It is on my conscience to add something to the discussion launched by your reply of May 29 to "Distressed Husband." He asks how to atone to his wife for a flirtation he had with his secretary, during his wife's absence from home on an extended trip. Having confessed his "fling," bit by bit, to his wife, she had adopted an unforgiving, disbelieving attitude toward him. She clings to the suspicion that he committed adultery, of which he is innocent. He says their marriage is seriously threatened; and he is "at his wits' end to know what to do."

Two words came to my mind as I read his story. These words were: "trust" and "moderation." It seems to me their marriage is threatened by (1) the wife's not knowing how to trust; and (2) the husband's erstwhile failure to appreciate the value of moderation. The one fault being no worse than the other, both should accept equal responsibility for what happened; and should support each other in mending the harm. What matter which one failed first? The one who was upright should have reached out a steadying hand to the other; provided the fall did not go unnoticed.

I believe all of us would be better if we knew how to be better. None of us is without fault. Even the best of us is not free of the sin of self-righteousness. Remember the parable of the publican and the Pharisee? —the publican bowed by remorse for acknowledged guilt? the Pharisee offering a litany in praise of his own virtues? Which of the two had most favor in the sight of God? When I see a coldly self-righteous person, I see a person on the defensive against some unacknowledged weakness within himself. He is afraid of himself; of his moral vulnerability; and he seeks reassurance by comparing himself favorably with those who have manifestly erred.

So, I believe that the measure of this wife's inability to trust her husband, having learned of his weakness, gives the measure of her self-distrust. What the nature of this self-distrust may be, one cannot say. The woman herself could not know, unless she had retraced every step of her living experience to come upon the truth. It might be an unconscious conviction that she would have behaved even less worthily, if similarly tempted—had she possessed adventurous daring. It might be a hidden "inferiority" feeling—a notion that essentially she is less attractive than most women. It might stem from the uneasy half-realization that she has, in the past, greatly "failed" her husband—though sexually always his "faithful" wife. At any rate, her present severe condemnation of him may be rightly construed as partial self-condemnation.

Thus, I believe with you, Miss Haworth that the suffering the husband's misconduct has visited upon both is an invitation to both to grow in understanding—understanding of the truth about marriage, spiritual laws and the true nature of their hidden selves. They must advance together to the stage of consciousness in which it becomes apparent that the blame for all misfortune lies with all of us. And that is as it should be. For then it must follow that we share in some measure the joy created by "the pure in heart;" and the gladness known to those who mitigate others' misfortunes.

In his book, "The Prophet," Kahlil Gibran has beautifully stated this philosophy as follows:

"Like a procession you walk together toward your god-self.
You are the way and the wayfarers.
When one of you falls down he falls for those behind him, a caution against the stumbling stone.
Aye, and he fall, for those ahead of him, who though faster and surer of foot, yet removed not the stumbling stone.
And this also, though the word lie heavy upon your hearts:
The murdered is not unaccountable for his own murder.
And the robbed is not blameless in being robbed.
The righteous is not innocent of the deeds of the wicked.
And the white-handed is not clean in the doings of the felon.
Yea, the guilty is oftentimes the victim of the injured.
And still more often the condemned is the burden-bearer for the guiltless and unblamed."

The encouraging part of it all is that we are not helpless. We can always hew away at the stone of disunity in our personal relations, even if we haven't the strength (or the understanding) to pick it up bodily and throw it out. N. G. D.

Believes Wronged Wife Should Read Riot Act

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It was with mounting fury I read your answer of May 29 to "Distressed Husband." Sometimes it seems beyond credence that you yourself could be a woman. Your charitable condonation of his flirtation with his secretary, which you carry to the point of imputing the blame to his wife, is downright revolting. Were I in his wife's shoes, I should hesitate a long time before I forgave a piece of behavior so unnecessary and unjustified.

Why did you not place the blame where the blame belongs? There was nothing in this man's letter to suggest that his wife ever had fallen short of her wifely duties. Yet you berated her in no uncertain terms—referring to her as a "smugly se"-righteous" woman who would, apparently, rather nurse a sense of irreparable injury in the situation, than try to cooperate in healing a wound to the relationship." You advanced the theory that, "through her own faults of omission and commission through the years, she doubtless has been largely instrumental in bringing her present dismay upon herself."

You passed over, as a matter of no consequence, the fact that the husband had fallen into the habit of discussing his wife with his secretary, "in a very unfavorable light." You said, also, that considering the fact that he is a man and his secretary a woman, it was natural that he would, in time, develop "a sentimental fondness for her, in consequence of her consistent attitude of helpful, friendly interest."

Don't you realize that such utterances place the stamp of approval upon philandering husbands; leading them to think it is their wives' duty and spiritual obligation to forgive the lapse? A wife might find it in her heart to forgive a husband's drinking parties in her absence from home; she might also forgive an unpremeditated "petting party" with a secretary; but what she cannot and should not be expected to forgive is her husband's disclosure of her weaknesses to another person. Since when has an office secretary's duties embraced the role of spiritual advisor to her boss? Since when has it become the custom for a married man to "spill the beans" to his secretary, concerning difficulties he may be having with his wife?

I wonder if the philosophy of your reply would have been the same, if the problem had been presented in reverse—if a married man had returned home from a trip to learn, in painful fragments, that his working wife had been entertaining her boss and co-workers in their home, with drinking and petting parties? That she had been going alone with the boss to his apartment? And had been tearfully telling him the story of her unhappy home life? Which of the two would you have castigated then —husband or wife?

Surely the "double standard" of morality went out with hoop-skirts. Today, what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. You say of this wife that "whatever her virtues, and you daresay they are many, of the 'respectable' woman variety, she lacks the great spiritual gift of personal humility." This poor wife has scant need of humility. What she needs is a sizable quantity of iron in her soul—to strengthen her while she stands up to this graceless husband and tells him where to get off!

Always heretofore, Miss Haworth, I have admired your clear thinking and sound judgment; but I find the advice given in this instance entirely unworthy of you. In conclusion—three cheers for any wife who has the courage to express severe moral condemnation of such behavior on the part of her husband. Sincerely, DAILY READER.

Rosette pockets and flower buttons give a feminine touch. For further information, call NA. 4200, Ex. 529

Clever Touches Enliven Fashion

No matter what the new WPB regulations do to the basic silhouette, clever accessories and trimmings will save fashion from the doldrums.

Royer, noted motion picture designer who predicted the current simplicity in clothes last winter and has been doing something about it since, is a master at dressing up a slim dark dress or suit with original touches.

In Hal Roach's "The McGuerins From Brooklyn," there's a good example of this. For Arline Judge to wear with a black moire suit, Royer designed a hat that's nothing but a huge rosette made of bright green veiling dotted with black chenille.

'Teen-Age Girls Should Guard Beauty by Right Food Habits

By Ida Jean Kain

THE WAY some of you 'teen-age girls eat, you're going to be old and gray at 30. You make a habit of skipping good, wholesome meals and then you fill up on sweets. That is just about the quickest way there is to lose your health—and your looks.

Now, honestly, what do you eat between meals? I asked this question at a girls' school recently and the answers gave me indigestion: Chocolate bars in the morning, strawberry sodas or banana splits in the afternoon, and peanuts and soda pop after dinner!

Maybe that is a slight exaggeration in your case. But I suspect it might hit an average for the 'teens. If it does strike home, all you have to do to be healthier, prettier and normal weight and cut down on your skin troubles is stop eating between meals!

Beauty Food

If you know what's good for you, you will eat your meals and you will make sure you eat all the foods you need. Nobody should have to coax you twice to drink your quart of milk a day. It is your best beauty food. And you will have a glass of fruit juice, along with two or three other fruits; a green, leafy raw vegetable, another green leafy cooked vegetable, a yellow vegetable, and any others your mother serves. There is no such thing as too many vegetables and salads.

You're young and you learn fast, so learn to like whole wheat bread. That is the best kind. And eat your whole grain cereal in the morning. Just to round out the day's protective and beauty foods, have an egg at one meal or another.

If you are too chubby, don't get the idea this list doesn't apply to you. You need the same foods but you can trim down on the calories. Here is the way to do it: Leave off the fat part of the meat, and pass up the gravy. Have only one slice of whole wheat bread and one pat of butter at a meal. Restricting the bread means you are also restricting the Vitamin B—and you need that and plenty of it for good nerves. So have some wheat germ mixed in with your breakfast cereal, or take yeast tablets. That will fix you up with Vitamin B.

Sweets Taboo

From any standpoint, you can get along without pie, cake, cookies and candy. If your skin is forever breaking out, keep away from chocolates, fats and pastries as you would from poison ivy. Instead of these, have fresh fruits for dessert and nothing between meals except fresh fruit and milk.

Make it a hard-and-fast rule to eat a hearty breakfast and an adequate lunch, and never to stuff, even at dinner. Get into the habit of eating regular meals and choosing the foods that make for health and good looks. If you do that you'll never have to worry about your weight.

Shirley Temple Likes Gay Colors

HOLLWYOOD. — No matter what the new WPB restrictions do to fashions, there will never be anything dull about Shirley Temple's personal wardrobe.

For there is no regulation against color, and Shirley's penchant for unusual combinations and distinctive shades will always be a safeguard against the banal and the commonplace in her clothes.

Most girls of Shirley's age like pinks and blues, or navy with white, or red with navy, or one of the accepted 'teen-age colors. But not Shirley.

Her favorite of all colors is a very sophisticated one. Not green or blue, but a combination of both: turquoise. A light-weight suit, which she first bought for Easter and thinks she'll wear forever, is of softest turquoise blue, simply trimmed in self-applique, worn with very grown-up brown accessories.

Shirley loves red, too. But instead of the usual schoolgirl red sweater with navy blue skirt and perhaps a navy coat lined in red, she wears an all-red dress with bottle-green accessories. Or a bright red corduroy coat over a beige wool dress or, again, over a yellow linen suit.

Summer White House Is 'Just a Cottage,' but Location Is Still a Secret; Debut Planned for Paulina Longworth; Check of Past Weekend Calendar Reveals Allout Record

IT'S "JUST A COTTAGE," but it is to be a summer White House of sorts—that little place the President has been looking for for the past few weeks and at last has found . . . That much, Mrs. Roosevelt divulged at her press conference yesterday. But no more. No more, that is, except that the place is "up the river." Up which river and in which State is still a secret, and probably will remain so. Mrs. Roosevelt did mention, however, that there were quarters near "the cottage" for a staff.

About her own summer plans, the First Lady was more specific. Comings and goings, appointments in town and out, will crowd her calendar from now until her next press conference on Tuesday, June 23.

In the immediate offing, there is, of course, the White House dinner at which King George of Greece will be honor guest tomorrow night. Following the pattern first set for President Prado of Peru, His Majesty will stay overnight at the Executive Mansion and then move across the street, to Blair House, the following day.

Accompanied by Diana Hopkins and her friend, Susan Parker, the First Lady will be off to Hyde Park on Monday. Susan's mother teaches at St. Agnes School, where Diana has been studying, and the two girls are close friends. Mrs. Roosevelt plans to open her summer cottage at Hyde Park and will spend as many weekends there as possible through the torrid season. The business of opening the cottage on Monday will be negotiated swiftly, for the First Lady is due to be in New York in time to preside at the meeting before which Eve Curie will speak.

Longworth Debut on June 19 . . .

Paulina Longworth, who was graduated from the Madeira School last week, will make her bow to society at a dance in Cincinnati on June 19. Accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, she left Washington for Cincinnati yesterday . . . Countess Eleanor Palffy, who is now in New York for a few days, will go from there to Long Island to spend the summer. With her is her daughter, Mrs. Archibald B. Roosevelt, jr., and the latter's young son, Tweed . . . Meanwhile, making plans to move soon from Countess Palffy's Georgetown home—the rent for which was a case for the Rent Control Board to settle some months back—are Flight Lieut. and Mrs. James Holman, who will move to Dayton, Ohio, about June 20 . . . The Holmans will sublease the house until the term of their lease runs out . . . Countess Palffy probably will return to Washington next winter, but her plans as yet are indefinite.

Each week sees the Capital calendar more crowded than the one before . . . but something of a record in an allout round of entertaining was chalked off from Friday evening until midnight Sunday . . . The mammoth reception at which the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante entertained in honor of Dr. C. Parra Perez was equaled in elegance and interest the following day when Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury—one of the few remaining "great ladies" of our time—feted Philippine President Manuel Quezon . . . I haven't seen more generals under one roof, or rather one terrace, this season . . .

Another Weekend Highlight . . .

Then there was the Olds-Auchincloss wedding on Saturday, finished off with a garden reception—a perfect party if there ever was one . . . Half an hour earlier, the bride-elect welcomed guests to her own wedding, while the prospective bridegroom, Maj. Gen. Robert Olds, stood nearby . . . The ceremony itself was brief and was underway before half the guests knew it . . . Senator Gore gave his daughter in marriage before an improvised altar in front of a mantel that was banked with white peonies . . . "It's the first time daddy ever gave me away," said the lovely Nina after the ceremony.

Friends, crowding in to congratulate the bridegroom, wanted to know where the couple were going on their honeymoon. "We can't go anywhere," wailed Nina. "Bob has a business appointment here tomorrow. The wedding trip will have to wait."

ABOUT THE TOWN: Uruguayan Ambassador Dr. Juan Carlos Blanco wonders if he should turn back at least one of the "X-cards" now belonging to his Embassy staff. "I suppose," he said, somewhat doubtfully, to a member of the State Department, "that we could manage without any X-card at all. What do you think I should do?" He was told, in brief, to hold on to what he has—for the present at least . . . Mrs. Roosevelt makes it a rule to attend private parties only on the rarest occasions, but she never passes up an opportunity to drop in when small Ruth Eleanor Armstrong is to share part of the spotlight. On Sunday afternoon, therefore, at the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Armstrong and Miss Lucile Furman for Mrs. Boerge Rohde, former United States Minister to Denmark, Mrs. Roosevelt was one of the earliest arrivals. Ruth Eleanor, who is named after Mrs. Rohde and Mrs. Roosevelt, helped to receive, and so did her twin brother, Robert Furman Armstrong. Mrs. Rohde, the former Ruth Bryan Owen, left Washington yesterday.

Dr. Bloedorn Is Host at Luncheon

The Army and Navy Club was the scene of a luncheon given by Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, yesterday immediately following the opening of the 118th session of the George Washington University School of Medicine. Dr. Bloedorn is dean of the school.

Mrs. McEnerney Gives Luncheon For Mrs. Wade

At a buffet luncheon in her home on Lowell Street, Mrs. Charles H. McEnerney entertained yesterday in honor of popular Mrs. Leigh Wade, who has been widely feted since her recent marriage.

Assisting her mother was Miss Nancy McEnerney and her house guest, Miss Peggy Rush of Memphis, Tenn., and Miss Mary Grace Ryan was also on hand to assist at the buffet table.

The guests included Mrs. George Trible, Mrs. E. L. Hoffman, Senora de Munilla, Mrs. George Allen, Mrs. James Cahill, Mrs. C. C. Windsor, Mrs. Hillery Hoskinson, Mrs. Clarence Grosner, Mrs. Barge Hartz, Mrs. Earl McIntosh, Mrs. William F. O'Donnell, Mrs. William B. Wardrop, Miss Meredith Howard, Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. Harmer Reeside, Mrs. Harry Daniel, Mrs. Dwight Kendall, Mrs. Mattie Porter, Mrs. McKenzie Davison, Mrs. Michael Sullivan, Mme. Elvina Orlicz-Dreszer, Mrs. William Chapman, Mrs. Eldon King, Mrs. Carl Markham, Mrs. John Shugrue, Mrs. James Hyatt, Mrs. Alva Brewer, Miss Marie McNair and Mrs. Carvel Leary.

J. W. Brown and Bride to Live Here

After a honeymoon in Atlantic City Julian Welford Brown and his bride of Saturday, the former Miss Bernice Amanda Christie, will make their home at the Rhode Island Avenue Gardens.

The Rev. Peter Marshall officiated for the 5 o'clock ceremony in the Lincoln Chapel of the New York Presbyterian Church as the bride was given in marriage by her father, William C. FitzGibbon. She wore pale pink, with lace fashioning the bodice and marquisette the full skirt of the gown, and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Lillian Richardson, and Joyce Regina Sangston, niece of the bride, was flower girl. Chester Fisher was best man, while H. Earl Sangston and Elgar Steinacher ushered. A reception was held at Hays-Adams House after the ceremony. The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. FitzGibbon, attended Ball State Teachers College in Indiana.

Meeting Today in Interest of Benefit

Mme. Prochnik, assisted by Mrs. David A. Robertson and Miss Patricia Prochnik, has called a meeting this afternoon of the dancers who will help at the benefit carnival at Wolf Trap Farm a week from Friday evening, June 19.

Among those invited are Miss Deloise Emmons, Miss Mary Lord Andrews, Mrs. John Conway Hunt, Miss Margaret Gordon, Miss Patricia Baker, Miss Elizabeth Stewart-Richardson, Mrs. Igor Cassini, Miss Elaine Darlington, Miss Betty Houghton, Miss Lydia Langer, Mrs. James O'Grady, Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, Miss Muriel Maddux, Miss Eleanor Flood, Miss Marion Norris and Miss Mary Theresa Norris.

The young men who will assist at the dance floor, where Sidney and his orchestra will play, are Judson Bowles, Lieut. James Raider, Ensign Gilbert Maxson, Allan Moulton, Barry Woods, John Potter, Ensign Lloyd Lockridge, jr., James Clark, George Mahoney and Francis Hoge.

Mrs. John Turner To Give Luncheon

Mrs. John Turner of Silver Spring, Md., will entertain at a bridge luncheon today at her apartment in Falkland for Mrs. Richard Pretz of Forest Glen, who will soon leave to make her home in Atlanta, Ga., where Mr. Pretz has been transferred.

Guests will be Mrs. S. S. Turner, sister-in-law of the hostess, who is visiting here from the Panama Canal Zone; Mrs. C. Russell Shetterly, Mrs. Howard R. Cloud, Mrs. Grover Poole, Mrs. Ray G. Bergstrom, Mrs. F. B. Talbott, Mrs. George Wheeler, Mrs. Roy Jacobson and Mrs. Karroll Sallust.

whose engagement to Dr. Charles MacStanfill of Tucumcari, N. Mex., is announced by her parents, Col. and Mrs. Howard Arnold Craig. The wedding will take place on June 25 at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel

Washington Girl To Be Bride of New Mexico Man

Col. and Mrs. Howard Arnold Craig announce the engagement of their daughter, Jeanne Marie Craig, to Dr. Charles MacStanfill of Tucumcari, N. Mex.

The bride-elect attended Hood College and the University of Maryland, where she was a member of Kappa Delta sorority.

Dr. MacStanfill is the son of Dr. and Mrs. C. M. MacStanfill of Tucumcari. He attended the University of New Mexico and the University of Southern California and was graduated from the medical school of the latter university. This month he will complete his year of internship at Walter Reed Hospital.

Plans are being made for the wedding to take place June 25 in the Walter Reed Memorial Chapel.

Invitations Out for Bates-Nicholson Rites

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Dorothy Mildred, to Harrison Bates on Tuesday evening, June 30, at 8 o'clock.

The ceremony will take place in All Saints Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase, Md. Later, there will be a reception at the Nicholson home, 103 Newlands Street.

James W. Reeds On Wedding Trip To New York

Now on a wedding trip to New York are Mr. and Mrs. James William Reed, who were married Saturday evening in the Church of Our Saviour. Mrs. Reed is the former Miss Helen Louise Terry, daughter of Mrs. Harry W. Terry, and Mr. Reed is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Decatur Reed.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Frank Terry, at the 8 o'clock ceremony, at which the Rev. Alvin Lamar Wills officiated. She wore a white mousseline de soie gown under her fingertip veil, which was held in place by a tiara. Her shower bouquet was of white bridal roses.

Miss Ruth Tillman was maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Mrs. Richard E. Green, a sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Katherine Anderson, a cousin of the bride. Allen Freeman was best man and ushers were Richard E. Green, a brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Carmie Jeffries, jr., a cousin of the bridegroom, and William L. Nevitt, cousin of the bride. Following the ceremony, there was a reception in the Parish Hall, after which the couple left on their wedding trip.

Lieut. Morgan and Bride at Home Here

Temporarily residing in Washington while awaiting Army orders are Lieut. Harold M. Morgan, U. S. A. A. F., and Mrs. Morgan, who were married on Tuesday, June 2, in the Washington Methodist Church in Alexandria. The Rev. C. C. Bell officiated at the 6 o'clock ceremony.

The bride is the former Miss Iverna Phelps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Verne G. Phelps of Oklahoma City, Okla., and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Morgan, also of Oklahoma City. For her bridal costume the bride wore a street-length gown of turquoise blue with a matching hat and corsage of orchids. Her matron of honor and only attendant was Mrs. Robert I. Carter, sister of the bridegroom, and Mr. Carter was best man.

Mrs. Morgan attended Oklahoma City University and is a member of Kappa Tau Delta, and the bridegroom, who attended the same university, is a member of Alpha Chi Nu fraternity. He is at present on duty with the ferry command of the Army Air Corps.

Mrs. Gray to Visit Here

Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward, who returned to Washington Sunday evening, following a weekend in New York, will have as her house guest the latter part of this week Mrs. Myron Gray of New York.

'Ring Out the Old, In the New' Is Theme of Australian Fete

By Patricia Grady

"We're sorry to be leaving Washington, but it's nice to be going home," said Mrs. Herbert Vere Evatt yesterday at the party which she and her husband, Dr. Evatt, who has been the acting Australian Minister since Richard Casey went to the Middle East, gave yesterday in the cool-walled legation on Cleveland Avenue.

Purpose of the fete was for the Evatts to introduce the new Minister, Sir Owen Dixon, to a large group of Capital officialdom, and to say adieu to many of the friends they have made in Washington. Dr. Evatt, who is Minister of External Affairs and Attorney-General of Australia, will leave for the West Coast and then for "home" with his wife, "shortly." Pressed for a more definite departure date, Sir Owen Dixon took a diplomatic hand in the proceedings. "It's like waiting for a bus," he explained, "when it comes, you get on it."

Sir Owen, who like Dr. Evatt, is a brilliant lawyer with long experience on the High Court, is expecting his wife to arrive in about three weeks. Showing the same informality that has marked the brief reign of the Evatts at the legation, Sir Owen was never content to stay long in the receiving line, but was constantly dropping out for a chat or strolling through the gathering.

"But that can't be Harry Hopkins—he never goes to parties!" exclaimed one guest as the almost mythical Mr. Hopkins put in an appearance. "He and Dr. Evatt are very good friends," remarked another guest in explaining the social phenomenon.

"Been on vacation since 1 o'clock today," beamed the Chief Justice, Harlan Fiske Stone, to a group around him, as Mrs. Stone chatted with Mrs. Walter Nash, wife of the New Zealand Minister. Mrs. Nash was congratulating Mrs. Stone on her grandchildren, whom she had met when her husband and the Chief Justice were given honorary degrees at Tufts College near Boston not long ago.

The South African Minister and Mrs. Ralph William Close came in wearing evening clothes. Like the other heads of mission of the British Commonwealth of Nations, they were going on to the dinner given by the New Zealand Minister and Mrs. Nash. The Russian Ambassador, Maxim Litvinoff, sauntered through the crowd and took a solitary walk in the garden. Leighton McCarthy, the Canadian Minister, proved himself a good assistant to the hostess, and passed a large sandwich-laden tray through the gathering after offering a tid-bit to his wife.

Sir Clive and Lady Baillieu were there as were the Netherlands Ambassador, Alexander Loudon, Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, and Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter. Constantly surrounded was Miss Alva Baird, daughter of Lord Stonehaven, who was formerly Governor General of Australia, and the Assistant Solicitor General and Mrs. Oscar Cox chatted with Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Dickinson. Mr. Dickinson, who is on leave from the University of California where he is dean of the law school, is here doing a special job for the Department of Justice.

Giving the proper military touch, without which no Washington party is complete these days, were the members of the recently arrived Australian military mission, headed by Lieut. Gen. E. K. Smart. Among the members of the mission were Lieut. Cols. Hicks and Sutton and Capt. Theo Scales. Captain Scales, who boasts three "pips" on his shoulder designating his rank, admitted that in his three weeks here he has frequently had the pleasant sensation of being mistaken for a lieutenant general by Americans who thought his "pips" were stars.

Among the many others in the pleasant 6 to 8 o'clock gathering were the First Secretary of the Legation and Mrs. Alan Watt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stewart, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mrs. Pat Leonard, all the members of the legation staff, and dozens of others.

Col., Mrs. Goudeau Give Reception

Old friends and guests from the Washington diplomatic service sets were among the 200 or more at a housewarming Sunday given by Lieut. Col. Lionel Claudius Goudeau, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Goudeau.

The new home overlooks the Potomac and nearby Washington. Among the many guests were the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceras, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Seth Williams, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Robert Denig, Col. and Mrs. A. H. Turnage, Col. and Mrs. C. B. Lober, Col. and Mrs. A. H. Nole, Col. and Mrs. O. P. Smith, Commander and Mrs. Ralph Malone, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Dickens.

Children's Shower New War Project

A Children's Shower and Fashion Show, a new project by which children can help children, will make its debut on the Washington scene on Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Robert Low Bacon.

The fashion show will feature clothes made by the British War Relief Society for British children and the children who attend are being asked to bring something that can be made over for British children.

Lieut. Baillieu Is Married In England

The news has just been received in Washington by Sir Clive Baillieu and Lady Baillieu of the marriage on Saturday in England of their third son, First Lieut. Edward Latham Baillieu of the Royal Horse Artillery, to Lieut. Betty Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Taylor of Windlesham, Surrey.

The ceremony took place in the Parish Church in Windlesham and the couple are now off on a few days leave before, Lieutenant Baillieu returns to his duties and the bride returns to the Surrey hospital, where she is on duty as a lieutenant in the Red Cross.

Sir Clive Baillieu, who with Lady Baillieu makes his Washington home at the Shoreham, is head of the British Purchasing Commission and is the British member of the United Nations' War Material Board.

They have two other sons in the British Service, their oldest, Lieut. William Latham Baillieu is now in Australia and their second son, Lieut. Robert Latham Baillieu, is now in Libya. Their only daughter, Miss Yvette Bailleau, is now active in war work here, as is Lady Baillieu, though they have both been turned down for canteen work with the American Red Cross because they are not American citizens.

Louise Donald Is Engaged to Ensign Brownlow

Capt. H. Gordon Donald, U. S. N., announces the engagement of his daughter, Miss Louise Moultrie Donald, to Ensign Lloyd M. Brownlow, U. S. N. R., son of Thomas B. Brownlow.

Miss Donald has lived a number of years in Washington during her father's several tours of duty here, but the wedding will take place late in June in St. Louis, Mo., where he is now stationed. The bride-elect is a graduate of St. Mary's in Raleigh, N. C.

Ensign Brownlow, who is in naval aviation, is now stationed at Norfolk, Va., at the naval air station. His home is in Helena, Mont., and he is a graduate of Montana State College, where he was a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

Mr., Mrs. Connolly At Virginia Beach

Now spending a few days at Virginia Beach are Mr. and Mrs. Maurice James Connolly, jr., whose wedding took place here on Saturday in the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament. The Rev. Charles Gorman officiated at 9:30 a. m., and a wedding breakfast and reception followed at Tilden Gardens. The ceremony took place on the silver wedding anniversary of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Fitch Mitchell of Washington.

Given in marriage by her father, the former Miss Barbara Jean Mitchell wore a wedding gown of white lace with a sweetheart neckline, outlined with seed pearls. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held in place by a coronet of seed pearls and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and stephanotis.

Miss Dorothy Althea Mitchell, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Richard Donnelly, of New Haven, Conn., a cousin of the bride, was best man. Ushers were Eugene Fitch Mitchell, jr., and Alma Ewing.

British Documentaries To Be Viewed by Press

Anglo-American Film Coordination Planned; Hemingway Preview at Little Tonight; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

TODAY AT NOON, the Washington office of the British Ministry of Information will have Sidney Bernstein as honor guest at a press screening of four one-reel, English documentary films, in the Warner Brothers projection room in the Earle Theater Building. All will pertain to British production and the war effort.

HELEN HAYES

Mr. Bernstein, recently arrived in this country by clipper, has been film adviser to the British Government's Ministry of Information for the past two years. For the next three months he will be "liaison officer" between Britain's film industry and American Governmental and motion picture interests in Washington, New York and Hollywood. It was he who maneuvered the commercial exhibitions in this country of "Target for Tonight," the film of the R. A. F. in action that stands as by far the most memorable picture of its kind released to date. It is he also who has decided opinions as to the trend film production should take on both sides of the Atlantic from this point out.

In a New York interview shortly after his arrival, Mr. Bernstein cited "Target for Tonight" and other similar English releases as evidence of the change in thought among the British peoples.

"We have suffered and seen a lot," the Motion Picture Herald reports him, "and we will not abide pictures which have no relationship to the war. That is, pictures about the war that have no sense of reality.

"We do not bar 'escape' pictures. Indeed, there is plenty of room for 'escape' films in British theaters . . . But we have also 'grown up,' so to speak. While I would not be impudent enough to advise American film producers, and have not enough knowledge of the scene here, it seems to me, broadly, and speaking only from my own experience in a country three years at war, that you people are undergoing the 'growing up' pains, in the making of films in wartime, which we have already gone through . . . Our studios, like our factories, in a sense of speaking, have turned to war production."

It is to bring about a closer harmony of thought and greater cooperation between the film makers of England and America that Mr. Bernstein is in this country. The films to be shown today, "Listen to Britain," "The Builders" and the others, will give visual expression to what he means. The occasion should be highly informative.

Patrons of the Warner neighborhood theaters, encountering more new faces about their favorite picture houses, deserve to know why. Further shifts in managerial assignments have been made. LeRoy Sherman, long manager of the Savoy Theater—now undergoing an extensive face-lifting out on upper Fourteenth Street—having resigned, Ernest Wells has moved crosstown from the Apollo to take his place, thereby setting the ball rolling again, as follows: William Rudden, from the Home Theater to the Apollo, as manager; John J. Marcon, from assistant manager of the Earle to manager of the Home; Alex Kalabokes, from Earle office to assistant managership, and Bert Hamm, from the Earle service staff to clerk in the office.

Juniors Tootle in Concerts

Loew's Cadet Band, under the conductorship of Raymond S. Hart, will give a series of Saturday morning concerts sponsored by the Department of Recreation, District of Columbia Playgrounds. Last Saturday the band, composed of 100 young Washingtonians, played at the Palisades Playground. The playground schedule for the remainder of the summer includes Montrose Park, June 20; Chevy Chase, July 11; Garfield, July 25; Rosedale, August 8, and Hoover, August 22. We'd been wondering whatever had become of this talented group of youngsters. Or is it merely that we don't get around enough?

It may be craning the neck pretty far into the future—and that despite the rubber shortage—but one of the outstanding moonlight cruises of the Wilson Line's S. S. Mount Vernon would seem to be the one being whipped into shape for the Monday night of August 31. On that date, National Defense Post No. 9 of the N. A. R., will entertain some 1400 service men—soldiers, sailors and marines—on a breezy junket down the Potomac. Post Comdr. Lamar E. Chamberlain has assumed personal charge of the arrangements.

Mr. Nathan Portnoff, the organist who was assigned by Meyer Davis to work at White Sulphur Springs—during the internment of the Axis diplomats there—became the favorite of the diplomats' children. They gathered around him every day, and he taught them the songs of Stephen Foster and Victor Herbert. When the children of the Nazi officials left, they presented him with a basket of fruit, and a card: "To our dear Mr. Portnoff" . . . The youngsters then departed with their parents, and boarded the Drottningholm. And on board that ship, Dieder Tannenburg, whose father was the First Secretary at the Nazi Embassy, entertained the Axis passengers by singing a song Portnoff had taught him—"Deep in the Heart of Texas."

Walter Didn't 'Live His Part'!

Hollywood, Calif., June 8.—When Walter Brennan completed his role as a sports writer in "The Pride of the Yankees" and went on vacation to his ranch near Joseph, Oreg., the editor of the small town weekly newspaper insisted that Walter cover the baseball game for the paper. Brennan pleaded ignorance of sports writing, but the editor said if he could do it in a movie, he could do it in real life. "When the edition is off the press," Walter wrote to Gary Cooper, "I'll mail you the worst account of a baseball game that's ever been written. "Some day," he said, "some one's going to make a picture showing a little guy jumping a big one and getting the daylights beat out of him—and one of the dearest traditions of our dramah will be shattered!"

Incidentally, when George refused to interview a newswoman on the Twentieth Century lot because he had no dressing room in which to receive her, he was told if he'd quit speaking disrespectfully to studio executives he'd get one. "Oh, in that case, skip it," said George, I'll just dress in the alley."

Gold in 'White Cliffs'!

Hollywood, June 8 (INS).—Clarence Brown has just written a check that will buy plenty of victory bonds for Ronald Colman for the movie rights to "The White Cliffs of Dover." Over a year ago Ronnie bought the rights to Alice Duer Miller's famous poem, with the announcement he would produce it. Meantime, the poem was set to music and the sentimental melody has sold more copies than any war song since "Roses of Piccardy."

RONALD COLMAN

Speaking of copies sold, Miss Miller's poem has had the phenomenal sale of 350,000 in booklet form, which guarantees a ready-made audience in advance. So far, Clarence has no cast for "The White Cliffs of Dover" and he isn't saying which company will release it. So just pretend I didn't say a word to the effect that it will probably be United Artists.

Robert Cummings, and not Fred MacMurray, will be the hero in "Princess O'Rourke," the movie that brings Olivia de Havilland back into the Warner fold again with love and kisses. Olivia likes this script and decided months ago it was right for her—but then some sort of an Alphonse-and-Gaston argument cropped up between her and the studio. Hal Wallis had arranged a trade with Paramount in which Warners were to get Fred MacMurray for this movie in exchange for Ann Sheridan in "Texas Guinan." New Annie won't do "Texas," and Fred, who won't finish "No Time for Love" in time, is also out. Bob Cummings, who made "Kings Row" on the Warner lot, will play a return engagement (borrowed, of course, from Universal,) and everybody is happy.

The "Andy Hardy" series brought fame to Judy Garland, Lana Turner, Ann Rutherford, Kathryn Grayson and Donna Reed. Now there is a lot of cheering for Esther Williams, swimming champion and the next gal in Andy's life. Esther's scenes with Mickey Rooney in "Andy's Last Fling" take place under water. Maybe some of you have seen Esther, who was in Billy Rose's Acquacade and won the women's championship for free-style swimming. M-G-M thought well enough of her to have her test made with Clark Gable.

"Home, Sweet Home"

HOME IS WHAT WE'RE FIGHTING FOR...

...NOT for Power; NOT for Glory; NOT for Plunder...

BUT, for the preservation of our American way of Life. And, what better expresses our ideals than the things we teach our children, at our own fireside. Whether it's a cottage or a mansion, we Americans are striving for the same thing . . . to preserve our HOME . . .

To Keep It FREE....
To Keep It SAFE....
To Keep It HAPPY....
To Keep It SACRED....

"BE IT EVER SO HUMBLE—THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME"

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Post Office Dept. to Offer Overtime Pay Solution

The Postoffice Department will break the deadlock over the bonus and overtime pay raise plans by suggesting amendments to the Administration's overtime bill that would provide benefits for all postal employes. Hearings will be resumed today . . . Insiders predict that the War Production Board's iron and steel appeals unit, which was transferred to New York City recently, will be brought back here . . . Two hundred employes of the construction division are slated to be transferred to New York this weekend but many believe this unit also will eventually be brought back here.

The President's 1943 budget recommendations for WPB, which were sent to Congress yesterday, provide for a doubling of the WPB staff. The war agency now has nearly 12,000 employes here. It will have about 25,000 here in another year. Space is now the toughest problem facing WPB. It has a 300,000-foot deficiency now and this will grow to 600,000—room for 6000 employes—by January 1 even after it gets temporary buildings.

Other war agencies than WPB are pressing for space. Plans to decentralize WPB and other new war agencies have been abandoned. That means just one thing—more old-line agencies will be forced to decentralize. The Budget Bureau has been working on decentralization plans for months and all or parts of a dozen agencies are slated for transfers. The bureau has postponed the unpleasant task of ordering agencies out until the facts have been checked and rechecked. Civil Service officials estimate that 50,000 new employes must be brought here in the 1943 fiscal year and everyone knows that plenty of changes must be made in order to fit these people into the city.

It is clear now that the Budget Bureau does not intend to allow old-line agencies to continue to expand here. General Accounting Office, for example, plans to hire several thousand additional employes but it is a good bet that GAO will be forced to decentralize its activities. Internal Revenue, Civil Service, National Housing Agency, Federal Housing among others will be forced to keep down their Washington staffs and possibly send some unit here to the field.

Representative Robert Ramspeck, the new Democratic whip in the House, will continue to be chairman of the important House Civil Service Committee. A better whip couldn't have been selected. . . . Robert Brady, the Office of Price Administration official who has been accused of Communist activities, will soon resign to return to his school teaching job . . . Office of Civilian Defense has appointed Frances Humphrey as employe services counsellor. Miss Humphrey will be a "big sister" to new OCD employes. . . . WPB is paying all its new employes on time now.

A patriotic gamble is staged every payday among the thousands of men working on the huge War Department building. Last week more than $2000 in war bonds were raffled off. The original idea was to sell 750 tickets at $1 each and to raffle off a $1000 bond. Business was too good and now the promoters, union representatives, are selling an average of 2000 tickets each week. Incidentally, the workers have purchased thousands of dollars' worth of war bonds. The $100,000 quota was passed two weeks ago and now the quota is $150,00.

Anticipating a fight on the House floor over the Board of Legal Examiners and Herbert Wechler, its executive director, Representative Houston of Kansas, brought out that Wechler wrote the Government's brief that led to the conviction of Earl Browder. Houston also brought out that Wechler had volunteered to step out if there was any question whatsoever of his Americanism . . . Conferees on the Independent Offices Appropriation Bill agreed to keep Budget Director Harold Smith's salary at $10,000 rather than to raise it to $12,000 . . . Luther Gulick is working on an administrative reorganization of WPB. He drew up the plan which resulted in the recent reorganization of the War Department.

Patriotic Limitations

Phoenix, Ariz.—The four Pryor children, Mary Ellen, Eddie, Nancy Lee and Ernest, started a lemonade stand and offered free drinks to service men.

When thirsty soldiers began to deplete their exchequer, the children hung this sign over their stand:

"Sailors and Marines drink free. Soldiers have to pay."

No Travel Ban on Sonny

Sleuths at police headquarters were frankly baffled last night over the mystery of a 3-year-old boy's travels.

The child, Sonny Shields, Negro, disappeared from his home at 224 K Street Northwest at 2 p. m. At 8 p. m. police at Philadelphia, 140 miles away, reported Sonny had been found, sitting alone on a train in the railroad station there.

73 Awarded Degrees by American U.

Honorary Doctorates In Law Conferred On 2 Government Bureau Directors

"To know a good man when you see one, to know a good idea when you hear one, to discern more of beauty wherever possible, these are the signs of successful education," Dr. Ordway Tead, chairman of the board of higher education in New York, told 73 persons who received degrees at American University last night.

Dr. Tead told the graduates that "the whole post-war era will depend upon the creative ingenuity of many individuals, and you, in whatever role you play as educated men and women, can be parties to this creative effort if you will only continue your education."

Two Government bureau chiefs, Harold D. Smith, budget director, and Arthur S. Flemming, civil service commissioner, received honorary degrees of doctors of law.

Smith, a native of Haven, Kans., and former budget director for the State of Michigan, was cited in recognition of his "most significant contribution to sound governmental administration."

Formerly of American U.

Flemming, who was director of the school of public affairs at American U. before becoming Civil Service Commissioner in 1939, was cited in recognition of his "outstanding leadership in personnel administration," especially in the war effort.

Those who were graduated magna cum laude from the college of arts and sciences were: Ilse Pauline Engel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Karl F. Engel, 3413 Quesada Street Northwest; Edgar C. Keller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Keller, 4007 Garrison Street Northwest, and Elizabeth L. Mathews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Mathews, 5301 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Thomas Harry Newby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Newby of 1827 Jackson Street Northeast, was graduated summa cum laude. Charles T. Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace W. Johnson of 4116 Fessenden Street Northwest, and Jacquelin Waldron, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Waldron, 3603 Thirteenth Street Northwest, were graduated cum laude.

In addition, Miss Waldron also received the $50 college honor prize, which is "awarded to the senior who has made the largest contribution to the college during the four-year course."

Others who received degrees were:

Jean McCandlish Shows Progress in Piano Recital

By Ray C. B. Brown

Felian Cerzia presents Jean McCandlish in a piano recital on Monday night in the Arts Club. Program of compositions by Bach, Scarlatti, Beethoven, Chopin, Debussy, MacDowell and Schumann.

Jean McCandlish deserved the congratulative audience that filled the gallery of the Arts Club last evening for her recital. Endowed with musical instinct, she is progressing steadily in artistic knowledge, and her advancement is guided by sincerity. In her playing one feels the honest attempt to express her own perception of the music, and to make technique the servant of interpretation. This seriousness of purpose is an excellent trait in so young an aspirant, and it should preserve her from the temptations of virtuosity. There seems to be little danger of her taking the wrong path toward mere brilliancy of performance, for she has poise and her readings show a consistent concern with the meaning of what she plays.

BROWN

Her program was not adventurous, and remained well within the conventional bounds, although she is already equipped for exploration. Her opening group contained Bach's A flat major prelude and fugue, the two Scarlatti pieces which have somehow acquired the names of capriccio and pastorale, and Beethoven's C major contradance. These were played with transparent clarity and a sure rhythmic sense.

Chopin was represented by the G flat major impromptu, the D flat nocturne and the G minor prelude—all of them limned with sensitive touch and careful regard for profile in phrasing. If they were lacking in morbidezza, that was one more indication of the candor with which Miss McCandlish utters her personal feeling.

Her choice of Debussy items fell upon preludes of contrasting character, the satirical "Ministrels" and the somewhat mystic "Delphic Dancers." One noted with approval her gravitation toward MacDowell, whose piano music is so sadly neglected by Americans. The "Witches' Dance" is not permeated with the composer's essential posey, but it may lead her on to the sonatas.

Her concluding number was the first movement of the Schumann concerto in which she had the support of her mentor, Felian Garzia. Her reading of that romantically charged music had dash and a forthright vigor that reached moments of real eloquence. The recital as a whole pleased as much by its evidence of accomplishment as by its promise of a more mature understanding.

Legion Heads And Wardens In Dispute

Department Adjutant Threatens to Call Every Legionnaire From Civilian Defense

Discord between top American Legion officials of the District and air raid wardens in the vicinity of the Legion Clubhouse, 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest, resulted yesterday in a threat by Department Adjutant Edwin W. Luther to withdraw every Legionnaire in Washington from civilian defense activities.

Aroused over the failure of wardens to accept the District Department's offer of its clubhouse for a dance to raise funds for civilian defense in the Columbia Heights Area, Luther declared:

"We don't want anything from them. We are trying to offer them something. If they don't want it, we certainly won't try to force it on them."

Luther Writes to Young

On instructions of Department Commander Heywood N. Saunders, Luther complained about the wardens' attitude in a letter to Defense Coordinator John Russell Young, declaring:

"If it is the desire of your office that the American Legion and its membership withdraw from all civilian activities in the defense of their city, a memorandum from your office is all that is necessary and instructions will be issued from this office which will take every Legionnaire in the City of Washington off of every type of civilian defense activity in which we are now serving."

Particularly insulting, according to Luther's letter, was the charge of any anonymous warden during a wardens' meeting Friday, at which the offer of the clubhouse for a dance was presented, "that American Legion members were drunkards and a bunch of drunks were coming in and out of the building at 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest and in general attacked the character and integrity of the membership of the American Legion in the District of Columbia."

Report Garbled, Wardens Say

Wardens who attended the meeting said Luther's report of the incident was somewhat garbled.

When the matter was brought up, they said, Assistant Zone Warden R. L. Hufham asked whether the offer should be accepted "in view of what happened during the blackout" of May 12.

Deputy Warden S. Alfred Nash, presiding at the session, remarked that Hufham evidently was referring to "drunks hanging out of the windows" of the legion clubhouse during the test air raid, according to the wardens.

Whereupon, they reported, Warden Benjamin Aronsohn, a legionnaire, demanded a retraction of Nash's statement and Nash's rejoinder was that he didn't intend to "besmirch" the legion and it would be best to let the whole matter drop.

In an official report to Deputy Warden Nash on the May 12 blackout, Sector Warden G. C. Stagg reports that merrymakers at the Legion Clubhouse violated regulations.

Department Adjutant Luther indicated to Coordinator Young that legionnaires' complaints were due not alone to the attitude of Columbia Heights wardens, but to that of the entire civilian defense organization.

"The American Legion, under mandate of the national organization," he wrote, "has extended the hand of cooperation to the civilian defense authorities in the City of Washington on repeated occasions. As an organization, the offers of assistance have not been accepted."

McNutt Tells Class to Beware Of 'Straw Men'

"The only thing that can threaten democracy is the kind of thinking that motivated the 'three straw men:' Complacency, defeatism and the will to compromise principle for the sake of a few years of ease," Federal Security Administrator McNutt said yesterday at commencement exercises for 43 Chevy Chase Junior College students at the Chevy Chase Methodist Church.

"Think back to last year," said McNutt. "Our greatest dangers came from within rather than without, from three straw men that Americans themselves have set up to hide behind because they did not like the view that loomed on the near horizon.

"Not military force, not economic aggression, not fifth column infiltration—not all these added together—constitute half the threat that lies within ourselves. Many, far too many people in this country are consistent about nothing except their reluctance to face the facts, and the willingness to seize any pretext for passing by on the other side while the world tumbles to ruin and carries us with it.

France Did Not Learn

"Taken as a whole, the ordinary everyday folks of our farms and cities—the folks who are America—gave more active credence to the spurious panic of Orson Welles' imaginary Men from Mars than they gave to the documented dangers of Hitler's will to power.

"England learned, perhaps at the last moment of reprieve, to put first things first. France did not. Which way will we go? Will we continue to hide behind the flimsy and futile protection of our three straw men? Or will we supplant complacency, appeasement and fear with clear thinking, courage and common sense?"

Other Graduates

Services Need Young Men, McIntire Says

Emphasizing the need for "very young" men in the services, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Surgeon General of the Navy, told 300 members of the George Washington Medical School yesterday that "Americans are not physically fit."

Speaking on the opening day of the school's 118th session, Admiral McIntire recalled that Japanese forces marched 300 miles through the Malayan jungle and still were able to fight and win over the British.

"Soldiers should be able to march 30 or 35 miles each day and then fight, if the situation requires it," Admiral McIntire said. "Therefore, older men are not acceptable because they cannot stand the strain. Even men of 35 are not up to such a grind."

He said that we have a "fairly good chance" to win the war in two years. If it lasts four or five years, he said, the armed forces will be calling more and more on the colleges.

"Students should feel that there is no stigma attached to their work in the class room, rather than in the line of combat, for they are filling gaps that will be essential in the future. We could no more do without schools than without food supplies to our armed forces," Admiral McIntire said.

Following his address, Admiral McIntire was awarded the degree of doctor of science by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university. The degree was to have been conferred at the regular graduation last week, but Admiral McIntire was out of town and could not attend.

Dean Walter Bloedorn, of the school of medicine, announced that new courses in military medicine and first aid have been added, now that the department is on a wartime basis for the first time in its history.

Dean Bloedorn also reported that enrollment had increased 10 per cent over last year, and that 78 freshmen were selected from more than 800 applications. He added that 35 members of the school of medicine faculty have been called into the armed services.

St. John's School Holds Graduation

Seventy-eight members of the St. John's College High School graduating class received diplomas in commencement exercises yesterday in Memorial Continental Hall. The Rev. Brother E. Pius, F. S. C., presided.

Vincent L. Toomey, Washington attorney, delivered the commencement address. John Edward Lynch, jr., was the valedictorian.

Paul Charles Adkins, cadet colonel, received the medal donated by the alumni society to the student with the best scholastic record. Joseph R. Veneziani was awarded the Leo A. Rover Medal for the best scholastic record among athletes. Joseph Damien Scull received the medal for Catholic evidence, the De La Sales Medal for French and the Social Studies Medal.

A gold oratory award went to Peyton Franklin Carter and another in elocution went to Charles Stanley Hawvermale. John Lynch, jr., the valedictorian, was given the Brother Azandias Medal for the best English essay, the Abraham T. Schwartz Medal for excellence in physics and the Brother Fabrician Memorial Medal for excellence in English.

Other awards included:

Brother Potamian medal for mathematics, to Paul Adkins; Sergt. Thomas H. McDonald medal for marksmanship, to Anthony Charles di Bartolo; attendance and punctuality medal, to Robert Francis Tarleton; typing medal, to John Ruppert Conley; cadet colonel medal, to Paul Charles Adkins; medal for captaincy of the band, to Paul Leonard Wedding; medal for captaincy of the best-drilled company, to Robert Joseph Hayes; medal for the best-drilled cadet, to William Mayhugh, and the best off-hand shot, to Anthony Charles DiBartolo.

A medal for the most proficient musician went to Harold Francis Lloyd; for most proficient noncommissioned officer, Clark Thomas Harmon; for first lieutenant of the winning company, Peter J. McKenna, and medals for second lieutenants of the winning company to John A. Pettit and James E. Dolan.

The graduates were:

Coast Guard Quarters Now Being Moved

Moving of the headquarters of the United States Coast Guard from the Liberty Loan Building at Fourteenth and D Streets Southwest, to the Southern Railway Building, 1300 E Street Northwest, started yesterday.

More spacious headquarters were necessitated by the President's order of February 28 transferring to the Coast Guard, personnel of the former Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation and the Division of Training of the Maritime Commission.

Moving of office equipment to the new headquarters is expected to take two more days.

Court Blocks Damage Recovery

Failure to invoke the proper Federal legislation in a suit for damages resulted yesterday in a decision by the United States Court of Appeals preventing recovery of $10,000 for injuries suffered by Raleigh Beddo, a scow employe.

The court ruled that Beddo's case did not come under the Merchant Marine Act but under the Longshoremen and Harbor Workers Act.

Beddo sought damages from the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. when a drive chain became disconnected from its sprocket injuring him while he was engaged in a dredging operation.

Washington's fiftieth traffic fatality of the year, Raymond Beach, 49, of 1233 K Street Southeast died yesterday at Providence Hospital of injuries received when struck by an automobile last Saturday evening in front of his home. Driver of the car, police said, was Marshal A. Pickett, 20, of District Heights, Md.

BEACH

Another traffic death locally was that of Orie M. Jacobs, supervisor of the filtration plant at the District Workhouse at Occoquan, Va. Mr. Jacobs was fatally injured when his car went over the side of a bridge near Leesburg, Va., Thursday, and he was pinned beneath the wreckage.

He was taken to the Loudoun County Hospital at Leesburg and early Sunday was transferred to Mount Alto Hospital here, where he died yesterday.

Meanwhile, the condition of James Fretz, 31, of 231 Eighth Street Southeast, was said by Casualty Hospital attaches still to be critical. Fretz was struck at First and B Streets Southeast early yesterday by a car which police said was operated by George Scheuch, 21, of Bradley Heights, Md. It was said that Fretz was knocked into a passing trolley car.

Ewing's Release On Bail Sought

A physician's report stating that Orman W. Ewing, former politician convicted of raping a young Government employe, may develop a "major psychosis" was filed in District Court yesterday by James J. Laughlin, defense attorney.

The report, prepared by Dr. Raymond K. Foxwell of the Medical Science Building, pointed out that the 55-year-old former Democratic national committeeman from Utah had lost 46 pounds since last October.

Star Moundsman of New Interhigh Champs Gets Bumpy, Triumphant Ride

Gleeful was the word for Central High's baseball rooters yesterday as they hoisted Aaron Weisenberg, southpaw hurler, to their shoulders after he had pitched the Vikings to the 1942 public school baseball title in an 8-3 game with Wilson. Weisenberg allowed only 3 hits for his second triumph in the 3-game series

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The Yankees and Dodgers seem to be rushing toward another collision in October. Nothing except a harrowing collapse can keep those two teams out of the world series. The Yanks are making a mockery of the American League pennant race with their ten-game lead at this point. The Dodgers, out in front by seven, are also beginning to look like a shoo-in.

POVICH

Brooklyn and the Yankees are proving, among other things, that there is more than one way to construct a winning ball club. In fact, the methods of the Yankee and Brooklyn ownership are in complete contrast. The Yankees' stars are home-grown in a sense. Larry MacPhail assembled his Brooklyn ball team by shrewd buying of ready-made big leaguers.

First Baseman Buddy Hassett and Pitcher Red Ruffing are the only Yankee regulars who have played with any other big league club, and Ruffing has been a Yankee for 15 years. Otherwise, the Yanks have nurtured their own talent, either on farm teams or on the big league proving-ground. The Yankees don't bother much about acquiring ball players from the other clubs.

That Yankee outfield of Tommy Henrich, Joe DiMaggio and Charley Keller has played big league ball only with the Yankees. Henrich they signed as a free agent after the Indians had him as a minor leaguer and bungled themselves out of title to him. Keller the Yanks signed before he was out of college and seasoned him on their Newark farm. They own DiMaggio now because they thought he was worth $25,000 back in 1934 despite a knee injury. The Red Sox called off a deal for DiMaggio when he was hurt in a taxicab accident while in the Coast league.

Yankee Infielders Home-Grown

Their infielders, Joe Gordon, Frankie Crosetti and Phil Rizzuto, the Yankees developed for themselves. Crosetti was a well-rated minor leaguer when the Yankees bought him, but the Yanks brought him out. Gordon was an untried college kid when the Yanks got him. Look at him now. Little Rizzuto was run out of Ebbetts Field a few years ago because he was too small. He's bulking pretty big now in that Yankee infield.

Save for Ruffing, who was bought from the Rex Sox years ago, the Yankee pitchers, too, are home-grown. Lefty Gomez broke into the big leagues with the Yankees. So did Ernie Bonham, Spud Chandler, Marius Russo, Atley Donald and Johnny Murphy. They have been brought along patiently.

Now look at the Dodgers. What Brooklyn is pleased to call its farm system hasn't actually developed a single player for the Brooklyn Club. Pete Reiser is the closest thing to a Brooklyn farm graduate, but originally the Dodgers gained title to him when Judge Landis declared Reiser a free-agent and ordered the Cardinals to give him up.

Ducky Medwick was bought from the Cardinals at the peak of his career. Dixie Walker, the club's third regular outfielder, served with the Yankees, White Sox and Tigers before Brooklyn picked him up. The Brooklyn infield was assembled wholly by purchase.

The only Brooklyn infielder who joined the club without previous infield experience is Pewee Reese, bought from the Rod Sox-owned Louisville Team for $75,000. MacPhail's check book landed Dolph Camilli from the Cubs, Billy Herman from the Cubs, Arky Vaughan from the Pirates and Catcher Mickey Owen from the Cardinals.

MacPhail Shrewd Manipulator

Brooklyn's pitching staff also came off the sales counter. Kirby Higbe was bought at a fancy price from the Phils, as was Hugh Casey. Larry French was a big leaguer of several years experience when the Dodgers got him in a trade. Schooboy Rowe was bought last month from the Tigers. The Dodgers took a chance on Whitlow Wyatt after he had a great season in the minors, and bought him despite the fact he had flopped with the Tigers and White Sox.

Perhaps the Brooklyn Club is entitled to more credit even than the Yankees for producing a winning ball club. Shrewd buying is as much of a talent as clever developing. In any event, MacPhail has demonstrated that a productive farm system is not the only way to assemble a winning ball team. The Dodgers have done very well with their league-wide culls.

The Dodgers' patchwork team has proven itself in a league containing the Cardinals who, like the Yankees, are exponents of the far-flung farm system. Last year and again this season the Dodgers have kept comfortably ahead of the Cardinals who have a reservoir of farm talent. But the farm system of the Yankees turns out better ball players. You need go back no farther than the last world series, in which the Dodgers also played.

Weisenberg Victor With 3-Hit Game

Year's Second Sports Crown Is Result Of 13-Hit Assault On Rookie Jack Ogle

By Bill Burnett

With much the same ease that it captured the 1941-42 interhigh football championship, Central High yesterday added this year's baseball crown to its trophy shelf. It trampled Woodrow Wilson's nine, 8-3, in the third game of the play-off for honors held the past two years by Western.

It was all Aaron Weisenberg and Pete Chipouris in the crucial game at Griffith Stadium.

The lanky, slow-moving Weisenberg, winner of a 4-3 decision in the 12-inning series opener, pitched his best game of the season. He doled out one single, one double and one triple, and struck out eight. And three times he fanned a Wilson batter to end the inning, throttling scoring threats.

Chipouris Also Stars

Chipouris, cocky little right fielder of the Vikings, contented himself with personally outhitting all his foes. He amassed two singles, a double, a triple and a walk in five times at bat. Augmenting his perfect record was the fact he drove in five of the winning runs.

None of the winners, as a matter of fact, appeared awed by the immensity of yesterday's playing field. They slugged Jack Ogle, Wilson's southpaw "find," and Carl Saine for a total of 14 safeties.

Ogle was the Vikings' main delight. They touched him up for 11 hits and a 5-to-3 lead in eight innings, and after Fielding and Wolfe had singled to start the ninth the big youngster was retired in favor of Saine. Vinson's error on Hill's grounder scored one run, and then Chipouris delivered up the only hit off Saine, a two-run double to center.

There was a time, however, when Wilson was very much in the game. As late as the sixth it enjoyed a 3-to-3 deadlock, achieved in that frame with one run after two were out. Don Hillock slammed the longest ball of the day against the right field wall for a double, then came home as Sullivan singled and Chipouris fumbled the ball.

But in the seventh the Vikings went ahead for good. Two men were out when Hill clouted a triple over Center Fielder Schwab's head. Chi-

Yankees Win Slugfest In 11 Innings, 11-10

By the Associated Press

New York, June 8.—The New York Yankees spotted the Cleveland Indians four runs in the first inning today and then battled their way to an 11-to-10 victory in the eleventh inning when an error let across the deciding tally.

It was the only game of the day in the American League and the two rivals went after each other with hammers. The result was 31 hits, including two homers by Jeff Heath and five safeties by Ken Keltner of the losers.

There was little to choose between the clubs until the eleventh when Joe DiMaggio led off with a single and Charley Keller beat out a safe bunt. Then Joe Gordon, who already had extended his hitting streak to 25 games, bunted and Relief Pitcher Tom Ferrick threw wild past third to let DiMaggio race home with the deciding run.

The usually faultless Yanks had made a couple of errors themselves in the first inning and these coupled with a single by Oris Hockett, a double by Keltner and Heath's first homer gave Jim Bagby a four-run start on the world champions.

However, Frank Crosetti opened New York's half of the first with a home run and they made five more in the second after Cleveland had batted Atley Donald off the mound with two runs on three singles and a long fly in the top half of the inning.

Ten men went to bat in the Yanks' big rally, with Bill Dickey starting and finishing the spree with singles.

Bagby gave up three singles and two walks without getting anyone out before Al Milnar came in, and the Yanks made three more singles off the lefthander. The game was nip and tuck the rest of the day with Heath collecting his eighth homer of the year in the seventh and adding a single after Keltner's triple in the ninth to tie the score. Each team used three pitchers and John Murphy received credit for the victory.

One Brooklynite Prefers His Nap To 'Bum' Serenade

By the Associated Press

New York, June 8.—The case of the Brooklyn Dodgers' victory calliope went to court today.

The complainant was bald, 70-year-old J. Reid Spencer, who demands his afternoon nap even if it interferes with the National League champions and he loses all his friends.

Last month the former music teacher asked a court order to stop the calliope, which booms forth over a loud speaker every day the team is home.

After 33 minutes of repartee, Magistrate James A. Blanchfield adjourned the case to June 22. That leaves Spencer with at least two more weeks to face the wrath of Dodger fans.

So far he has received numerous "scurrilous letters" in which the writers went to great lengths to explain their feelings about anyone who would carp at the league leaders.

"Even some of my own neighbors have turned against me," the sleepless Spencer sighed.

Meet the Nats Tonight at 9; Changes Made

Sweeping changes in the Nats' lineup will be put into effect tonight when the Cleveland Indians move into Griffith Stadium for a series opener under the lights at 9 p.m.

4—Second Baseman Bob Repass will play third base.

Buck Newsom will get the pitching job against the Indians tonight. He owns the distinction of winning his last start, a 10-inning 3-2 triumph over Detroit.

The backsliding Indians, now tied for fourth place, will attempt to capitalize on the Nats' known weakness against left-handed pitching and start Lovell (Chubby) Dean on the mound.

Bucky Harris has resolved to move Cullenbine into the regular Washington infield and give him the important fourth-place hitting job despite the fact that before he was traded to Washington, the Browns benched him for weak hitting, .190 to be exact.

Estalella has seen his batting average diminish steadily after a lofty

Navy Academy Cutter Wins Bay Regatta

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., June 8.—Highland Light, a Naval Academy cutter, was first across the finish line and first in corrected time in yesterday's 18-mile Chesapeake Bay sailing yacht regatta, sponsored by the Naval Academy.

Highland Light, winning the class A race, crossed the finish line in the elapsed time of 2:34.34 hours while her corrected time was 2:18.54.

Valiant, owned by Leo P. Rock, Baltimore, sixth finisher in the fleet, captured class C honors with elapsed time of 3:38.29 and corrected time of 2:44.07-3.

Capt. C. K. Christian, of the Naval Academy, said the next races sponsored by the academy tentatively are scheduled August 26.

With the local collegiate baseball league scheduled to open next month George Washington University now finds itself without a coach, following Vinnie De Angelis' acceptance by the Army Air Corps.

DeAngelis will leave immediately for duty as a physical education director at Maxwell Field, near Montgomery, Ala. Either Freshman Coach Otis Zahn or Athletic Director Bill Reinhart are expected to fill the vacancy.

Derringer's 3-Hitter Beats Braves, 3 to 1

Only One Man Gains First in Eight Innings As Big Paul Nears Fame; Issues No Walks

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 8.—Big Paul Derringer almost got a no-hitter today as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Boston Braves, 3 to 1, and swept their series of six.

For eight innings the only Brave to get on base was Eddie Miller, whose easy grounder bounced out of Bert Haas' hands in the first inning.

From then until the ninth, when Lew Gremp broke the spell with a single, followed by two more singles, the big Kentuckian was everything and everybody.

Ernie Lombardi, once Paul's battery mate, sent a long fly to the scoreboard in the seventh, but Rookie Clyde Vollmer brought it down.

Issues No Passes

Paul walked nobody. Aside from Haas' first-inning bobble, his team played perfectly behind him.

Then the stand groaned as Gremp's drive sailed into the outfield and landed safely, to spoil a target that Paul has aimed at for years—something he came close to twice last year, in one-hit games on the road against St. Louis and Chicago.

The Reds chased Tom Earley, the Boston starter, in the first with a pair of runs on an error and singles by Lonnie Frey, Frank McCormick and Eddie Joost drew the first walk of the game off Mannie Salvo. Frey bunted, but the throw was late, Marshall sacrificed, and McCormick was walked purposely. Haas forced Joost at the plate, but Walker singled Frey home.

Michael S., Please, Not Mike Jacobs When Being Sued

When it comes to legal bouts, Mike Jacobs, New York boxing promoter, would rather be known as Michael Jacobs.

The veteran matchmaker, who has engineered fights for such boxers as Joe Louis, Tony Galento and Buddy Baer, filed a petition in District Court yesterday asking postponement of a civil action against him "until he is properly named and identified."

Jacobs' petition was in answer to another petition for an injunction filed recently by Ray C. Alvis, Washington fight promoter, who charges there was improper accounting in several matches handled jointly in Washington by Alvis and Jacobs.

Attorneys Melvin D. Hildreth and Charles W. Mandel, representing Jacobs, denied the charges and attached to the petition copies of documents showing disposal of funds.

The petition also claimed that the proceedings were questionable on the ground that Jacobs, a resident of New Jersey, had been described by the plaintiff as a District resident.

Central's Band Was Patriotic— But Out of Turn

"Calling 'em from the stands" is not confined to major league baseball or even the garden variety of fan, it was demonstrated in yesterday's Central-Wilson game for the local schoolboy championship at Griffith Stadium.

In this case the guilty party was the leader of Central High's band.

Here is the setting: It's the last half of the ninth, Wilson at bat with Central leading, 8-3. Two men are out and Carl Saine of Wilson, has two strikes and two balls on him. A fast one whizzes past Saine and the band breaks into the National Anthem.

Fans and players stand at attention. When the last tuba note dies Umpire Mattingly announces the game is not over. The count on Saine is 3 and 2, and another pitch sends him to first on a base on balls. It takes Billy Jawish's high fly to actually end things.

Central Squeeze Fails—Trying to break a 3-3 tie in yesterday's final interhigh play-off, Central's Bob Hill was forced back to third when Wilson's Freddy Vinson decided to let Pete Chipouris steal second unhindered. Third Baseman Larry Sullivan dropped Vinson's throw but recovered in time to hold the runners. Play was at Griffith Stadium

On the Line
With CONSIDINE

New York, June 8.—Out of a dugout, heavens knows where, comes a letter from Maj. Johnny Roosma, who played baseball and everything else he could lay his hands on at West Point, about the time General MacArthur was superintendent and Hans Lobert, now manager of the Phils, was baseball coach.

CONSIDINE

We mentioned Maj. Roosma in these dispatches early in the baseball season. In an interview, Lobert spoke to us feelingly about his old boys, and related how Roosma had cabled congratulations to him when Hans was made manager of the Phils. The cable came out of the fire and brimstone of Pearl Harbor. We don't know where the following letter came from. It was passed by a Navy censor. Suffice it to say that somewhere, sowehow, men still dream of the games and the friends of old.

"Anyone who played for Hans, loved him," Major Roosma writes, excusing his writing because "the dugout is too dark." He adds, "He knew the game, played it hard and coached it well. His big smile, personality and drive had qualities of leadership that are most essential in an Army officer. Anyone who played for him could not fail to inherit some of these qualities.

"Hans was all business on the baseball field. He taught us to 'stay in there and fight' until the last pitch," writes this line officer. "I venture to say that he has more of his students in this war, leading troops, than any other coach. You can bet they'll be in there with the 'yea-ha' spirit.

"Work Hard . . . Never Quit, Etc."

"Yea-ha is the morale word which our West Point Baseball Team used. Hans passed it on to us. It means 'be alive, work hard, never quit, be loyal and think.' When I joined the —— Infantry, I passed it on to the regiment. Yea-ha is on the lips of eveyr gimlet (regimental nickname—motto: Bore, brother, bore). It is the word that distinguishes a gimlet from other soldiers. The word that turns defeat to victory. The word that stimulates the soldier to take another step forward and fire one more shot. It has worked wonders and it will remain with this regiment forever. Here's a song we have, to the tune of 'When My Baby Smiles at Me':

When the gimlets yell, yea-ha,
They'll tear that confounded line apart.
Give them the yea-ha spirit now,
It's the word that brings sweet victory.
They charge, they fight,
They play the game with all their might
When the gimlets yell, yea-ha.

"Here's a story or two on Lobert at West Point. At lunch before each game Hans would stand up at the baseball training table and sound off. He'd say, 'Today we play Navy (or whatever the team was). I say to hell with Navy.' Before long the entire mess hall would pick it up and would join in the chorus. It was a real morale factor.

"Hans was quite fussy about umpires and I presume he still is. However, in the summer camp baseball league, Lobert was our chief and only umpire. That was his privilege for donating many gallons of ice cream to the winner. In one particular game, Red Reeder was playing first, Sparky Beard was catching and I was pitching. Well, Hans wasn't feeling his usual self that day. His eyesight was bad, spelled with a capital. So we gave him a dose of his own medicine. Everytime he made a guess we got on his neck. Frankie Frisch was a palooka at baiting umpires compared to us. Of course most of it was prearranged, but at first Hans didn't catch on.

Hans Didn't Like It

"When Hans stood behind me, Sparky Beard told me to duck the next time he pegged a hard one to me, so the ball would hit Hans and wake him up. When I caught the corner of the plate with one, and Hans cried 'ball,' I burned him up by saying, 'Well, at least I'm fooling the ump.' Hans was wild. He threatened to forfeit the game.

"But the straw that broke the camel's back came when we got up to bat. Hans was umpiring behind the pitcher and didn't move when one of us sent a grounder trickling down the third base line. He called it foul from where he stood. Red ran out and stuck his nose right in Hans' face, in big league style.

"One by one we all joined in. Hans hollered right along with us for a long time, and then he did a very unusual thing for an umpire. He began to smile, then laugh, and he said, 'All right, boys, the ice cream is on me.'

"I don't know what he's going to do with the Phils. He probably hasn't much to work with. But I do know this much: His understanding of men is phenomenal. It was the reason why he was such a great favorite of Gen. MacArthur, who nover wrote a truer line than when he wrote, 'Upon the fields of friendly strife are sown the seeds that on other fields, in other days, will bear the fruits of victory'."

Record $2189 'Double' Hits at Charles Town

Flick Wins Second And Freetone Takes Third to Complete Track's Rich Payoff

(Charts on Page 20.)

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 8.—A record daily double pay-off of $2,189.60, the largest on the books in this State, went to two lucky ticket holders here this afternoon. A short, dark-haired man who said he was from Baltimore stepped up to the cashier's window to present one of the precious "8 and 3" pasteboards and smiled broadly as the cashier counted out the small fortune. He then presented the man who sold him the ticket with a $20 bill. A policeman cashed the other ticket and said that he was getting the money for a friend.

The big pay-off was the result of a pair of disregarded horses winning the second and third races. In the second race, J. C. Crivella's Flick, at odds of 14-1, took the lead early and held on to win by three lengths. Jockey Herb Claggett rode the $30 filly.

Between the second and third races, the possible pay-offs were displayed and they ranged from $106.80 on combinations ending with Washed Out to the $2,189.60 figure on Freetone and the same amount on Massau's Beau.

As was the case with Flick, Freetone, owned by J. F. Donaldson and ridden by Jockey E. Carrillo, went to the front during the run to the first turn and was never headed. Carillo kept the daughter of Dr. Freeland going long enough to win by a length margin.

Veteran Jockey R. Scott was suspended and denied the privileges of the track here today for an unsatisfactory ride in the first race. Sco'' was aboard the Cedar Hill Farm's Never Home, the odds-on choice in the first race. The 9-year-old, second in her previous start, failed to rally and finished third behind Saint Pyrewick and Not Sure. The winner was an $11 shot.

Saran, owned by A. V. Galotta of Washington and well ridden by Jockey Buddy Root, won the Falls Church Purse. Saran took command from No. 1 post position and was never seriously threatened, winning by three lengths from A. A. Gray's Shaileen. New Face, a longshot, was third in the field of eight going a mile and a sixteenth. Saran paid $7.80 and was clocked in 1:46 4-5 over a fast track.

The Fairfax Handican went to R. F. Tartiere's Light of Morn, another front-runner. Light of Morn was not hurried early in her race of last Saturday, but today she came out of the gate on top and stayed there. Royal Echo was second and Navy, the favorite, was third. Timed in 1:20 1-5 for the 6½ furlongs, Light of Morn returned $8.80 to her backers.

A Pair of Happy Endings for Holders of '8-3' Daily Double Tickets

Yanks Near Half Million Home Attendance

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, June 8.—In four Sundays at home this spring the New York Yankees have drawn 234,910 fans and their total home attendance already is almost half a million. . . . Ernie Bonham was pitching on three days' rest when the Cleveland Indians beat him yesterday; previously he had been getting five to seven days between assignments. . . . Dutch Leonard, the Nats' star pitcher who suffered a broken bone in his leg about six weeks ago, won't be ready for duty again for several weeks. . . . Estel Crabtree, who had to have an operation a few days after he succeeded Billy Southworth as manager of Rochester two years ago, sprained his achilles tendon while pinch-hitting last week a few days after again becoming manager of the Wings. . . . He was on crutches.

All baseball record books show the name of Cincinnati's pitcher as Eugene Earl Thompson, Jr., but the income tax people discovered his birth certificate was made out Junior Eugene Thompson . . . Clyde Vollmer, who hit the first major league ball ever pitched to him for a home run last week for Cincinnati, was riding the bench at Syracuse of the International League because of weak hitting . . . The Boston Braves moved their home plate 10 feet closer to the fence and made a booming start, but now have only two hitters over .300; they are Jim Tobin and Ernie Lombardi, who rooms at Tobin's house.

When Cleveland rushed in a new pitcher the other day to pitch to Lefty Gomez during a Yankee rally a cynical reporter blurted, "Now I have seen everything" . . . Jim Gallagher, general manager of the Chicago Cubs, was so tickled at getting to buy Jimmie Foxx after putting in a claim when he saw the star's name on a waiver list that he declared, "Next time I see Joe DiMaggio on a list I'm going to claim him too. Who knows what might happen!"

The Chicago White Sox lost 18 of their first 22 games while averaging a fraction over two runs a game . . . then they boosted this run average up to five and won 14 of their next 22. . . . Don White, who could see the pitching in the Pacific Coast League well enough to hit .463 for the San Francisco Seals, had to receive special treatment for his eyes before being accepted into the Navy. . . . Once a Dodger always a Dodger note: Jimmy Wasdell of the Pirates was so happy at getting an infield single in Cincinnati last week he got down on his knees and kissed first base.

Hole-in-One, Plus Two, Makes a Hole in 3

Lancaster, Pa., June 8 (AP).—Robert Eicholtz made a hole-in-one at Media Heights Golf Club yesterday—but he had to score it on his card as a 3.

Playing with Frank Soulier and Henry Muller, Eicholtz drove his first two tee shots out of bounds and then holed his third.

Waller Wins Photo Verdict At Aqueduct

By the Associated Press

Aqueduct Race Track, N. Y., June 8.—In a finish that remained in doubt until the camera's evidence was posted, John C. Clark's Waller nosed out Arnold Hanger's Dit to take the first money that went with the thirty-seventh Queens County Handicap, traditional opening day stakes feature, here this afternoon.

Myron Selznick's Can't Wait, early pacemaker in the recent Suburban Handicap, was favorite in today's mile and a sixteenth headliner and again failed to hold an early advantage. He finished third, a length and a half behind, after racing in the worst going along the rail and meeting with slight interference.

Waller, a $10.50 for two shot, negotiated the journey over a sloppy track in 1:44 flat under Billie Thompson. The race was run to order for the St. Germans gelding, which was scoring his first success since accounting for Jamaica's Exceisior Handicap.

Suffolk Downs Feature Race To Smart Crack

Boston, June 8 (AP).—Smart Crack from the stable of Daniel J. Sullivan, scored a nose victory over Mrs. Sam Orr's Us today in the feature 6-furlong sprint at Suffolk Downs.

The winner negotiated the 6 furlongs in 1:14 over a slow track and paid $22. $6 and $2.60 in the mutuels. Us returned $3.60 and $2.20 while Wake Robin's show price was $2.20.

Dominic DiMaggio Visits Enlistment Office; Bosox Worry

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 8.—The Boston Red Sox had visions today of losing another outfielding star today when Dom DiMaggio, hard hitting center fielder, appeared at the Navy enlistment office.

DiMaggio said, however, he had n intention of enlisting, but merely was accompanying a friend on a visit to the naval office.

Bucs-Phils Play For Fund July 9

Pittsburgh, June 8 (AP).—Pittsburgh Pirate President William Benswanger announced today that the Pittsburgh-Philadelphia game for the benefit of the Army and Navy relief fund will be played the night of July 9.

Benswanger said the game originally had been scheduled for the afternoon of July 9 but that permission to play an extra night game had been granted the Pirates by Baseball Commissioner Landis.

96% of Lead Salvaged From Ohio Trapshoot

Columbus, Ohio, June 8 (AP).—Marksmen fired approximately 9100 pounds—4½ tons of lead into three-day barrage at Ohio's annual championship trapshoot, but experts estimated 90 per cent of the lead would be salvaged.

"Nothing is lost that would aid the war effort," said Ray Loring, manager of the Amateur Trapshooting Association, which presents the Grand America event.

"The powder in shotgun shells isn't used in any other kind of shell or cartridge. The lead pellets are practically all recovered, and the brass from the shells isn't lost, for every shell is picked up and finds its way into new ammunition."

Tomochichi Wins

Chicago, June 8 (AP).—Taking the lead at the start and holding it, Huntley and Sher's Tomochichi beat half a dozen other 3-year-olds in the best race of a drab card at Lincoln Fields today.

The Cardinals Must Feel Like The Man on Merry-Go-Round

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 8.—When a baseball club travels at the pace the Cardinals have gone the past two weeks—winning 10 games and losing 3 for a percentage of .769—yet fails to gain ground in a pennant race, brother, it is up against a tough proposition.

Yet that's the record of the scrapping Redbirds who still are confident of winning the 1942 flag despite the fact that today, on the eve of an important three-game series with the Brooklyn Dodgers, they find themselves seven games behind the bums.

While the Cards were winning 10 of the last 13 games the Dodgers were stretching out with 11 of their last 14.

"A contending club figures to beat the favorite perhaps 50 per cent of the time," said Manager Billy Southworth as his Cardinals rested up for tomorrow night's engagement, "and we have a slight edge on the Dodgers.

"But they're a good ball club and you're not going to kick them around.

"If anybody beats them, it'll have to be us because nobody else in the league has been doing anything with them."

Southworth plans to pitch Southpaw Max Lanier in the opener and use Ernie White, another lefty, and Mort Cooper or Lon Warnecke, both right-handers, in the two day games. A clean sweep of the series would still leave the Cards four games behind.

So far this season the Cards have won three out of four from Brooklyn with Lanier, Warneke and White the winning pitchers.

Something else for Southworth to worry about: The Cards now are without a .300 hitter in the line-up, Enos Slaughter dropping out of the select list Sunday with just one hit in six times at bat.

Two Horses Fall, 3 Jockeys Unseated in Delaware Race

Free Double Wins Feature Before 6500

By the Associated Press

Delaware Park, Stanton Dela., June 8.—Some 6500 fans here this drab afternoon were afforded an unexpected thrill when two horses fell and another lost his rider during the running of the featured 6-furlong Elsmere Purse.

The mishap occurred just as the seven-horse field was swinging by the quarter pole. Many Lands, evidently losing stride in the muddy going, went down, pitchink Jockey W. Balzaretti heavily. Cortege, one of the choices apparently fell over the prostrate Many Lands, and Eddie Wielander, leading rider at the meeting, was thrown to the ground. Luckily neither rider escaped any more than a shaking up and both regained their footing immediately. Both Many Lands and Cortege scrambled to their feet and ran off uninjured.

In endeaviring to avoid the pile-up, Jockey C. Mojena, aboard Bastinado, fell from the saddle, but he too was uninjured.

Brandywine Stable's Free Double was the winner of the Elsmere. The gelded son of Bold Venture was sent into command by G. Nihan right at the start of the 6 furlongs' spin and he showed the way at every pole to register a 2¼-length triumph over York River. The latter moved up to challenge Free Double at the top of the stretch, but could not close the gap. Hard Bargain was easily third best, hitting the wire six lengths to the fore of Indian Sun, the only other finisher.

Free Double was a slight favorite and his straight pay-off was $6.80. The Brandywine colorbearer was clocked the six panels over the muddy track in 1:18.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAINT FYREWICK, $11.00, $4.60, $2.80; NOT SURE, $9.00, $5.00; NEVER HOME, $2.60.

SAINT FYREWICK was rushed to contention on outside going to turn, moved into lead approaching stretch and drew out under good handling. NOT SURE raced in first flight on inside and held on gamely. NEVER HOME raced between horses early, saved ground entering stretch, but could not rally. STAR DANCE was keen forward factor and weakened in final stages.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:03⅕. Winner, J. C. Crivella's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLICK, $30.00, $12.40, $9.80; GOOD HEAD, $5.60, $5.00; SEA MISS, $3.80.

FLICK went to front on outside going to first turn, drew out on backstretch and held sway thereafter, but was put to pressure to hold GOOD HEAD safe. The latter raced wide, moved up menacingly and hung right at close. SEA MISS closed some ground. TAUT was off alertly, raced closest to pace to stretch and then weakened.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:28. Off at 3:28½. Winner, J. F. Donaldson's br. f. (3) by Dr. Freeland—Tonine. Trained by M. Johnson. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:17.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FREE TONE, $78.20, $20.00, $7.80; ECOWAY, $5.60, $3.60; CHIEF TEDDY, $5.20.

FREE TONE, first away, saved ground while setting good pace and held on gamely under long drive. ECOWAY moved up menacingly leaving backstretch, but hung in final drive under pressure. CHIEF TEDDY was prominent early, moved up on backstretch, and weakened in final stages. G. G. HAMILTON rallied mildly from a sluggish beginning.

Daily Double, FLICK and FREE TONE, Paid $2,189.60

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 3:58½. Winner, Mt. Manpat's ar. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL CROSS, $7.80, $4.80, $3.80; BOB'S PASS, $9.20, $6.40; MACIE MARGARET, $4.20.

ROYAL CROSS was taken to inside early, saved ground while improving position, responded when placed to punishment and wore down BOB'S PASS to win going away. BOB'S PASS took command early, saved ground and was weakening at end. MACIE MARGARET was hard ridden and had no excuses. DISCOBOLO had no excuses.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:22½. Off at 4:23. Winner, Mrs. P. G. Simms' gr. m. (5) by Trace Call—Silver Lustre. Trained by P. G. Simms. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILVER BEAM, $10.40, $5.40, $4.40; TRYBAK, $3.60, $2.60; BAR SHIP, $3.00.

SILVER BEAM was steadied closest to pace of TRYBAK, responded gamely when shaken up and wore down latter in closing test. TRYBAK saved ground while setting pace but could not resist winner while strongly handled. BAR SHIP raced on inside but failed to rally. CENTERVILLE had no excuses.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:52. Off at 4:53¼. Winner, J. Hartnett's br. g. (4) by Chilhowie—Sea Sega. Trained by J. Hartnett. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:26⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIGHT OF MORN, $8.80, $4.20, $2.60; ROYAL ECHO, $5.80, $3.00; NAVY, $2.40.

LIGHT OF MORN, better handled than Saturday, forged to front at once, set good pace and held on gamely under drive. ROYAL ECHO was vigorously handled closest to pace, lugged in during stretch run and Claggett was unable to do her justice. NAVY lacked early speed and came brilliantly in closing stages. IDA TIME was well placed throughout and showed good effort.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:46. Off at 5:47. Winner, A. V. Galotta's br. f. (4) by Black Servant or St. Germans—Far Star. Trained by V. Arthur. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:46⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SARAN, $7.80, $4.20, $4.20; SHAILLEEN, $14.80, $8.40; NEW FACE, $9.80.

SARAN, first away, saved ground under mild restraint while setting pace and drew out in closing stages to win easily. SHAILLEEN was rushed up on outside early to get closest to pace and was second best. NEW FACE raced evenly and showed good effort. ROYAL BUSINESS was well handled and was not good enough. FITZEDWARD broke down badly.

NINTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:13½. Off at 6:14¼. Winner, G. Davis' gr. h. (5) by Gino—Sunaihi. Trained by V. Arthur. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:54⅘.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al: Trainer Mike Johnson, Scheduled to saddle J. E. Donaldson's Freestone, did not see the $78 shot put the finishing touches on the record daily double here yesterday. Johnson was called to Washington just before the race because of the death of his father, Edward Johnson. The deceased was the father of 21 children. Jockey Clarence Wright came back after serving a three-day suspension for rough riding. The injured jockeys—Scocca, Woodstock and Goggi—are all coming along nicely. Woodstock, who suffered a dislocated ankle, was at the track yesterday hobbling on crutches. J. Donald Hay, the mutuel manager, went to Hagerstown yesterday to talk over plans for the coming meeting with Manager Harold Bester. Hagerstown will operate regardless of train service, and the same goes for Cumberland. Trainer Pat Poluch has lost the services of two horses. Hagerstown Boy and Bullet B have broken down and will be on the shelf for some time. A 2 per cent sales tax has been ordered by the West Virginia Racing Commission to accompany all claims. Mrs. Ray Fineberg shipped two juveniles here for racing and they were taken over by Trainer J. P. Phillips. The last four days of this week will be run for the benefit of the Charles Town Horse Show Association. There will be no change in the racing set-up, however, and the programs will go along as in the regular meeting. Conditions books for the "victory meeting," starting next Monday, are in the hands of the printer. Owner-Trainer J. Hartnett, whose Indian Sea won his second race of the meeting yesterday, is a former jockey and once rode in the Grand National in England. The boys were discussing the fastest breaker ever seen at Charles Town and everybody agreed on Washoe Valley, one that used to almost shoot out of the gate. Good care today. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—FLYING KILTS has the speed that decides these short sprints and reserves the call over these. SATCHEL and SHY MISS have accounted for purses here and will be in the thick of contention.

Second race—NOT ALONE turned in a promising effort last out and should make the most of the No. 1 post position in this field. CHANCER is rounding into best form and is dangerous. BILL K for the minor money.

Third race—ROM is well down on the reserve list and a doubtful starter. However, this one should take it all if in action. LADY MASCARA has worked well and is dangerous. PETES GOLD will be right there if sent postward.

Fourth race—PERSIAN QUEEN gets the inside post position and should get to the top early and stay there. GOV. SHOLTZ is better than that last and is a threat. DUCHESS DEL is an upset possibility.

Fifth race—BROOMORIA will like the track and gets my call in this rather open affair. READY-ABOUT, a recent winner, and SCARLET FLAME, winner of two, should battle it out for the place and show.

Sixth race — ROLLS ROUGH could be the right one. Needs only the right handling. MY ONE and MARANDAN to account for the other awards.

Seventh race—TYR has all the earmarks of a winner in this field and I'm going to string along. PURPORT is due to awaken and is a threat. PURPLE DAWN to take care of the others.

Eighth race—BUSY FINGERS may account for this event if this one runs back to Maryland races. WHO REIGH is formidable but may not go well if the mud comes up. BOAT'S CREW won here.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take MAN AT ARMS, SCHLEY AL and DUPLIKET.

Bobby Bensinger Upsets Buddy Adair in City Net Play

D. C. Junior Titlist Wins In 3 Sets

Johnsen Wins Twice For Quarter-Final Berth at Edgemoor; Bill Breese Victor

Stocky, red-thatched, 18-year-old Bobby Bensinger, for whom great things are predicted in local tennis, upset sixth-seeded Sergt. Buddy Adair of Fort Meade yesterday to gain the quarter-finals round of the City of Washington tournament at Edgemoor.

Bensinger, District junior champion and former boys' national indoor titleholder, won a match that was easily the feature of the day's play, 6—0, 7—9, 6—3. Adair narrowly averted a straight-set loss when he fought off a match point with Bensinger ahead, 3—5, and went on to take the deuced second set.

Otherwise the favorites were not extended. Third-seeded Davis Johnson won a pair of matches to enter the round of eight. The George Washington University medical student, last local conqueror of District of Columbia Champion Barney Welsh, beat Burgess, 6—0, 6—2, and DeWitt Smith, 6—3, 6—1.

Sixth-ranked Bill Breese whipped Kay 6—3, 6—1, in the second round, while a pair of unseeded but dangerous veterans kept pace to also gain the third round. They were Bud Chandler, the fourth-ranking national player at 1928, who turned back Peet, 6—0, 6—2, and Jerry Courtney, newcomer from New England, who eliminated Mendel, 6—4, 3—6, 6—2.

Yesterday's Results

First round—Peet defeated Ellis, 6—6, 6—1, 7—5; Cassini defeated Theeman, 6—4, 8—6; Reynolds defeated Muller, 6—1, 6—2.

Second round—Willis defeated Hackney, 6—4, 6—4; Johnsen defeated Burgess, 6—0, 6—2; Chandler defeated Peet, 6—0, 6—2; Welsh defeated Hayes, 6—3, 6—1; Breese defeated Kay, 6—3, 6—1; Courtney defeated Mendel, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3; Royal defeated Storch, 7—5, 9—7; Bensinger defeated Adair, 6—0, 7—9, 6—3; Johnsen defeated D. Smith, 6—3, 6—1.

Royal defeated Dorsaavage, 7—5, 6—2.

Schmeling, Neusel In Another Meeting

Rome (From Italian Broadcasts), June 8 (AP).—Max Schmeling, one-time heavyweight champion of the world, will defend his European title in September against Walter Neusel, the German delegate to the Association of European Professional Pugilists announced today.

Vittorio Mussolini, son of the Premier, was elected chairman of the association. The September bout will be Schmeling's first since the Battle of Crete in which he participated as a parachute soldier and was wounded.

Six Flights Paired In Publinks Tourney

Scores of 78 Make Championship 16 At East Potomac; Week Given for Each Match

Pairings for 86 players in 5½ flights in the East Potomac Spring Tournament were announced yesterday by Bobby Bowers, manager of the public links course. First round matches in all flights must be completed by next Sunday and players will be allowed a week for each match through the finals, slated the last week in June.

Roy Smith and Rod Marion tied for medal honors with a 71 and two scores of 78 made the chimpionship flight, Jim Housey and Robert Sheehan winning out when their names were drawn from a hat while H. Redding, Joe Miller, Jack Frost, N. Burroughs and Hank Peel were placed in the second flight, all with 78s.

With the exception of Dick Jennings and W. W. Seay, winner and runner-up in the public links championship last fall, most of the par shooting municipal players entered the tournament. Pat Axtell, a former national public links qualifier, failed to make the first flight with a 79.

The women's flight will be paired today.

Woodmont Pairings Are Redrawn

Due to an unavoidable mixup in the original pairings, the second and third flights in the Woodmont Club Handicap Chapionship were drawn a second time, Pro Gene Larkin announced yesterday.

The Class B handicapped players will compete in the second flight and a third flight of eight players was composed of Class C players. The first flight remained the same.

First round matches must be played by Saturday night in all flights.

Second Flight—Class B

D. C. Women's Golf Entries to Close Thursday at 1 P. M.

Entries for the District Women's Golf championship close Thursday at 1 p. m. with Mrs. C. P. Magruder, tournament chairman of the association. With Chevy Chase host to the week-long affair starting next Monday, at least five and possibly six flights are expected.

The prize list will be in keeping with the times with a $50 bond to the winner and a $25 bond to the runner-up and winner of each flight.

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes of Manor Club won the title last year over Mrs. Betty Meckley. Mrs. T. O. Brandon, Columbia, was medalist.

Union Printer Nine Defeats Naiman, 7-6

Staving off a late Naiman Photos rally, the Union Printer nine yesterday nosed out the Departmental League leaders, 7-6, in an exciting battle on the Ellipse. The victory was the Printers' sixth in nine games, leaving them one game behind Naiman in the standings.

Pitcher Bailey limited the losers to seven hits over the nine innings. He was in trouble only in the seventh and ninth, when Naiman tallied three and two runs, respectively. Meanwhile the Printers slugged two hurlers for 12 safeties.

Life Guard Positions Approved for Amateurs

New York, June 8 (AP).—Amateur swimmers may take jobs as life guards for the duration of the war without jeopardizing their amateur standing, Secretary Dan Ferris of the A. A. U. said today.

The demand for life guards has become so great that the national registration committee decided to relax its rule for the duration," said Ferris.

Lucy Rose Rolls 137-368 to Pace Lafayette Win

The Lafayette Alley girls won their first match of the summer season last night by soundly drubbing Clarendon when Lucy Rose came up with individual highs of 137-368 to lead the scoring. Lil Copeland helped with 327 and Georgia Hays, Jessie Sacrey and Bobbie Clarke aided with respective totals of 326, 317 and 302. Anna Daut led Eddie Goldberg's special match team with 128-328. Aline Fairchild had 313, Capt. Helen DeBinder 309 and Helen Roberts 301. The two teams have a return match scheduled for Lafayette next Sunday.

PENN RECREATION

The Pennettes won another tilt over the weekend in their drive for the championship of the Summer Recreation League, taking the strong Bethesda Bowling Center girls into camp by the score of 1573 to 1561. Ruth McClintic topped Capt. Mildred Brockdorff's team with a 337 set while Madge Lewis had 124-327 and Dolly Coppridge 317. Alma Mehler led the losers with both Mildred Greene and Ruth King contributing identical 321s. Ruth Rothgeb had an even 300. The two teams will bowl again next Sunday night at Bethesda.

TAKOMA

Evelyn Gay starred in the Recreation match against Brooklyn with a triple-header strike that gave her highs of the night of 138-391 to lead the Takoma girls to a 1641 set that topped Brooklyn by 24 sticks. Jimmie Harding tossed in 334 and Capt. Kay Caul 309 with Stimmie Hart getting 308. Martha Biggs had 328 to head the losers with Evelyn Sebastian posting 323, Vickie Croggon 326 and both Lois Gladding and Audrey Freschi totaling 320.

CLARENDON

The Clarendon Ladies League handicap was won by Sarah Jepson with a 350 total, the runner-up being Ida Goldberg with 333. Jessie Wilson's 329 and Barbara Shepherd's 327 placed them third and fourth, respectively, while Nellie Miller's 122 was high game out of the money.

The Clarendon Commercial "C" postseason tournament was won by Joe Smith, Arnold Bus, with a 389 with Stanley Smith, Arlington Postoffice the runner-up after a 381 pinfall. Vernon Hall, Rynex Service, and Bill Yardley, Arlington Postoffice, each had 368 to tie for third place. Pete Pratico, Buckingham Barbers, had high game of 135.

start this season and Harris no longer considers the Cuban vital to the club's success, particularly at third base. Repass, in his brief trial at the third base job, has far excelled Estalella.

The insertion of Cleary in the second base job is a vote of confidenec in the little firebrand from Chattanooga who broke into the Nats' lineup on Sunday with a fancy exhibition of fielding and two hits. He is not expected to be a great asset to the Nats' batting attack, but Harris believes Cleary will give the club better second-base protection than any candidate thus far.

Frisch on Coaching Lines Snapped Bucs' Losing Streak

Phils Were Victims, But Welcomes Ones After 10 Losses

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 8.—A ten-game losing streak brought Onkel Franz Frisch, peppery manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, out of hiding in the dugout and as soon as he took up station on the coaching lines—presto! the slump vanished like a bad dream.

It took the absence of Coach Jake Flowers who is trying to make connections with the Navy—to bring Frankie from the dugout to full-time coaching duties for the first time since he became Pirate manager in 1939.

After watching Frischian strategy help Pittsburgh to four straight victories—the Bucs' longest streak of the season—the fans may insist that he stay on the chalk lines.

'Tis true the Bucs' victims in their streak were the futile Phils but after ten straight losses a victory over the Thirty-second Ward Public School would have been regarded as occasion for a legal holiday by Bucco faithful.

The fans were in bad temper when fiery Frankie moved out front and many lusty Bronx cheers greeted the old flash. But the boos were choked on sighs of admiration as Frankie manipulated defeat into victory with such things as well-timed squeeze plays, timely use of pinch hitters and daring orders to "hit away."

"There isn't anything wrong with this club that a few hits and a little better pitching won't cure," Frankie growled. "If anybody thinks these boys are staying in sixth or seventh place—a rude shock is on the way."

Maybe Frankie knows whereof he speaks. The Buccos made trouble for everybody until they folded. They may take more if such big stickers as Elbie Fletcher, Vince DiMaggio, Bob Elliott and Maurice Van Robays hit their stride.

pouris was passed intentionally, stole second on an attempted squeeze play. It was up to Ned Brogan, and he came through with a clean hit that scored both runners before he was out trying to take second.

Central's first scoring threat was a fizzle. In the opening inning, Fielding's grounder was knocked down nicely by Shortstop Jawish, but retrieved too late to make the putout. On Ogle's wild pitch the runner loped all the way around, only to be tagged at home, Hardison to Hillock. An error and single, however, put new life in the Viking attack, and the inevitable Chipouris drove both runs in with his first hit.

In the top half of the third, Central upped its edge to 3-0 when Left Fielder Farnham dropped Hill's drive and Chipouris tripled to right. But that lead lasted only until the losers got to bat.

With two out Jawish walked and Schwab tripled him home, chalking up Wilson's first hit of the game and its only one in the first 5 2-3 innings. Schwab also scored, but not on a hit. Weisenberg's wild pitch did the trick.

Capt. Overesch To Be Promoted At Annapolis

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, June 8.—Capt. Harvey E. (Swede) Overesch, star Navy athlete of 30 years ago who was appointed the Middies' athletic director last month, is on the verge of establishing another record.

Overesch's advancement to the athletic directorship and head of the United States Naval Academy's physical training department marked the first time in history a former academy graduate athletic manager was awarded the post.

Today the office of Rear Admiral John R. Beardall, academy superintendent, announced Overesch soon will become commandant of midshipmen, succeeding Capt. M. S. Tisdale, present commandant. The academy's statement said Tisdale would be detached from his present post and ordered to sea duty "in June."

An academy spokesman said the change "probably would occur shortly after graduation," scheduled here June 19. Overesch's transfer thus would be effected in less than 30 days from assignment May 28 as athletic director.

Others close to the academy said they believed Overesch's tenure as athletic director would be "the shortest in Naval Academy history."

Perry in Office

The announcement also reported that Commander Lyman S. (Pop) Berry, Navy's All-America football star of 1918 and present graduate athletic manager, would be named "acting athletic director and physical training department head" until Overesch's successor is appointed.

Perry served as acting athletic director before Overesch arrived here to succeed Capt. T. Starr King, detached in April.

Tisdale, born in Wenona, Ill., has been commandant of the academy's 3100 midshipmen since April 1, 1941. Overesch, a native of Lafayette, Ind., served several years with the Pacific fleet before being ordered to duty here.

During his midshipman days, Overesch excelled in football, basketball and crew; captained the 1914 grid squad, and was awarded the Navy Athletic Association sword for "general excellence" in athletics when he was graduated in 1915.

Banks' Gross For 1941 Sets New HighMark

Insured commercial banks of the country in 1941 had gross earnings and current operating expenses in excess of any year of deposit insurance, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation announced yesterday. Gross earnings aggregated $1,730,000,000, or 99 million dollars over the previous high level reached in 1940.

The increase in gross earnings, the Government agency pointed out, was partially offset by an increase of 71 million dollars in current operating expenses, so that net earnings increased by only 28 million dollars during the year.

The increase in gross earnings is attributed chiefly to an increase of 70 million dollars in the amount of income received from loans, reflecting the expansion of loans which was accompanied by the gain in industrial output resulting from the war program. The average rate of income received on loans during 1941 declined to a new low of 4.27 per cent.

Net charge-offs on assets (losses less recoveries and profits on assets sold) of nine million dollars were at the lowest level recorded since the inception of deposit insurance, with the exception of 1938, when recoveries and profits on assets sold exceeded losses on assets.

Net profits before dividends increased by 54 million dollars during 1941 to a total of 455 million dollars. About one-half of the increase in net profits was due to larger net earnings; the balance was due to the reduction of 28 million dollars in charge-offs.

Interest and dividends on securities increased by nine million dollars during 1941, owing to the rise in the banks' holdings of obligations of the United States Government, since the rate of interest received on securities declined for the fourth consecutive year and averaged 1.95 per cent.

Home Financing Dips

Urban home financing in the District of Columbia during April amounted to $5,159,000, Federal Home Loan Bank Administration economists announced yesterday. Some 1039 nonfarm mortgages of $20,000 or less were recorded during the month. The figures compare with March recordings of $5,044,000, and with $6,251,000 reported for April last year.

Savings and loan associations maintained their lead in number and amount of mortgages recorded by all types of lenders in April as shown by the following table:

	Number.	Amount.
Savings and loan associations	376	$2,025,000
Insurance companies	35	616,000
Banks and trust companies	79	843,000
Individuals	330	972,000

Cotton, Wheat Drop Sharply In Late Trade

By the Associated Press

The principal agricultural commodity futures markets came under pressure of liquidation yesterday after early advances based on Washington reports of plans for a Senate bill which would provide for Government loans on basic agricultural staples at full parity.

New York Cotton Futures abruptly reversed trends following substantial gains and closing prices were down $1.50 to $1.65 a bale. Wool tops showed small closing gains.

Chicago wheat yielded advances of about a cent a bushel to close ⅝ to 1 cent lower. The decline here was partly in sympathy with a sharp dip in rye prices. Corn closed unchanged to ¼ of a cent down.

Livestock markets were highlighted by a break of 25 to 40 cents a hundred pounds in steer prices. Hogs were fairly steady and shorn lambs strong to 15 cents higher.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples declined to 97.43 per cent of the 1926 average from 97.50 per cent Saturday.

New Aviation Gas Plant Starts Work

New York, June 8 (AP).—The Standard Oil Co. (N. J.) announced today it has placed in operation the first of the new fluid catalyst refining units which will boost the supply of 100-octane aviation gas and materially aid in the production of synthetic rubber.

In the first 10 days of operation, the company said, the new unit exceeded the anticipated output by 20 per cent.

More than 30 similar plants are being built throughout the country at a cost of more than $100,000,000 by various oil companies.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 8 (AP).—The grain market's attempt to rally on the strength of proposed legislation to put new artificial Government props under prices collapsed today.

Gains of more than a cent a bushel were posted in the wheat and rye pits early in the day, with advances almost that good registered by other cereals, but these were wiped out before the close.

Wheat tumbled more than 2 cents from the early highs, rye more than 3 cents and soybeans 3 to 3½ cents. Wheat closed ⅝ to 1 cent lower than Saturday; July, 1.16⅝; September, 1.18⅝@1.19. Corn unchanged to ¼ off; July, 85⅞@86⅝; September, 88½. Oats ⅛ to ¼ down. Rye 1¾ to 2 lower, and soybeans 1¾ to 2 lower.

Wheat came within about a cent of the eight-month lows posted last week, July oats equaled last week's 1942 low, some soybean futures were at new bottom figures for the season and all rye contracts hit lows not quoted here since November.

Early buying was stimulated largely by Washington reports that a bill will be introduced in the Senate making mandatory loans at full parity, instead of 85 per cent of parity, on basic agricultural commodities. Traders pointed out that should this legislation be passed the wheat loan rate, for example, would be raised from $1.32, basis No. 2 grades in Chicago, to above $1.50.

Retail Charge Account Rules Found Lenient

Federal Reserve Board regulations designed to control charge accounts in retail stores, which became effective May 6, have proved to be so lenient that unless they are amended many retailers feel that the weakness of the rules will permit violations on a large scale, according to a summary just prepared by J. Anton Hagios, manager of the Credit Management Division, National Retail Dry Goods Association.

The summary is based on reports from member stores of the N. R. D. G. A. on the effectiveness of Amendment No. 4 to Regulation W, promulgated by the Federal Reserve Board in an effort to control consumer credit.

The summary, which was mailed yesterday to 5600 member stores throughout the country and to every Federal Reserve bank, states that every retailer agrees that wartime consumer debt liquidation and retail credit control as implemented through Regulation W is a sound step and beneficial to the retailer as well as to the American people. Credit control, it holds, has always been a basic principle of our entire consumer credit structure.

More Lenient Than Expected

But Amendment No. 4 dealing with charge accounts, Mr. Hagios said, "has somewhat startled the retail trade and the credit fraternity." Retail circles feel that the amendment turned out to be far more lenient than had been generally anticipated, he reports.

Mr. Hagios said that most merchants and credit managers with whom he discussed the new amendment asked him in a puzzled manner where the element of credit control comes in, "if a customer can resort to the simple expedient of curing a delinquent account without a down payment and go on merrily charging to her old account?"

Some of the improvements to Regulation No. 4, suggested by retail credit men, are as follows:

1. There should be a down payment of one-third in connecton with curing charge account defaults.

2. The regular account so cured should remain closed to further purchases pending the completion of the curing process.

3. No distinction should be made between listed and non-listed commodities except one item, food, which should remain outside the scope of the regulation.

4. Stores should be required to report all accounts applying for the curing remedy to the credit bureau.

Too Many Loopholes

Retailers are admittedly fearful that unless these or similar requirements are placed in the amendment, there are enough loopholes to permit many widespread violations.

"In fact," Mr. Hagios said, "some members of the association with whom the above proposal was discussed said that simply reporting to a credit bureau accounts to be cured is totally inadequate. They were of the opinion that if Regulation W were to be amended further, a provision should be included requiring every store to get a trade clearance from the credit bureau before opening a new account.

"The proposal has also been made that a penalty might be levied for opening a new account known to be in default with another store or for opening an account in the same name but a different address. In addition, some thought a customer should be required to sign a statement when applying for an account that she has no outstanding accounts in default elsewhere. Suggestions such as these have not only poured into this office but, we know, have been transmitted to the Federal Reserve authorities as well."

Eastman Kodak Leads Brisk Stock Advance; Traders Cheered by Big Mid-Pacific Victory

New York, June 8.—Fifty so-called peace stocks in the blue chip class put on a belated rally in today's market, apparently responding to the big Midpacific victory over the Japanese fleet.

Hesitancy was the rule at the start and mild irregularity left trends in doubt by midday. Early failure of the list to celebrate the blast at the Oriental Axis partner was a bit disappointing to Wall Street and selling cropped up after the opening. Realization of the importance of the best war news since the world conflict broke then began to take hold and nervous shorts ran to cover.

The covering operation proved to be difficult because the wanted stocks were not for sale except at wide spreads. Eastman Kodak was the first to turn handsprings and with jumps of 1 to 2 points it eventually was up 7¾ points, closing with this gain. In most of the board advances, however, turnover was restricted.

In addition to the Kodak sprinter, 1 to 4¾ points were tacked on Coco-Cola, Texas Co., Philip Morris, American Airlines, Eastern Air Lines, Union Pacific, American Telephone, Texas Co., and International Harvester. J. I. Case was up 2¼ at a new year's high and General Motors and Pepsi-Cola made new 1942 peaks.

It was not a one-way swing, however, as steels, utilities, coppers, aircrafts and mail orders were under water the greater part of the day. Rails improved at the last.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks held a gain of .5 of a point at 36.3, highest mark since March 4 and the best day's upturn since May 21. It was the fifth successive advance in this barometer. Transfers totaled 335,690 shares against 486,710 last Friday.

Buying timidity in the morning was attributed mainly to the fact the recent recovery had been the most sustained since January and analysts thought some sort of consolidation or resting period was due.

Scrap Rubber Drive Yield Put At 500,000 Tons

New York, June 8 (AP).—The United States Rubber Co. estimated today that about 500,000 long tons of scrap might be recovered by intensive collection.

In a survey covering the last five years' supply, the company calculated the following amounts of scrap rubber might be reclaimed:

1941—With 1,600,000,000 pounds of tires available, 714,000,000 pounds consumed by reclaimers, leaving an 890 million-pound surplus; about 50 per cent of this recoverable.

1940—Surplus, 330 million pounds, 50 per cent reclaimable.

Figures for 1939, 1938 and 1937 were called "frankly speculative," but the survey estimated the recoverably invisible supply at 25 per cent for 1939, or 220 million pounds, and 10 per cent each for 1938 and 1937, or 78 million and 66 million, respectively.

Restriction of new tire sales caused old tires to reappear in the used market, the report pointed out, and therefore a shortage was foreseen in the 1941 surplus. The company expected to reap a good harvest of the 1940 surplus, however.

The average weight is 25 pounds per scrapped tire. The industry generally agrees that about 85 per cent useable rubber is yielded from scrap.

Furniture Firms Warned to Shift To War Products

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 8 (AP).—Furniture manufacturers had a warning today to convert plant facilities to war production before it is too late.

Incorporating cautionary remarks to the manufacturers in the twenty-second annual report of Seidman & Seidman, accountants to the industry, Frank E. Seidman, one of the partners, declared that "those manufacturers who do not join the parade are very likely to watch it go by."

"In view of prospective restrictions on output," Seidman asserted, "furniture manufacturers who can do so should promptly convert their plants to war production.

Seidman reported that the average furniture manufacturer realized a net profit of 5.8 per cent on sales in 1941 as compared with 2.8 per cent in 1940. He estimated that household furniture output at manufacturers' prices amounted to 740 million dollars last year, but he said the increase over 540 million dollars in 1940 was attributable to "a mark-up in prices rather than to physical production increases."

Bonds' Market Value Unchanged in May

New York, June 8 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange reported today that 4166 listed bond issues with a par value of $61,956,472,933 had a market value May 29 of $59,257,509,674, an average price of $95.64.

This compared with 1163 issues with par value of $60,571,668,883 and market value as of April 30 of $57,923,553,616, an average of $95.63.

New York Cotton

New York, June 8 (AP).—Cotton futures prices dropped sharply again today, losing as much as $1.65 a bale in a swelling volume of speculative liquidation headed up by selling orders from New Orleans.

The closing range, $1.50 to $1.65 a bale under Saturday's finish, left prices at the year's low levels set in January 2.

Observers said recent buyers, noting the more favorable tenor of private crop accounts and his indifference of mill buyers to recently dropping prices, had decided to lighten their commitments.

Stop-loss orders uncovered by the downturn lent momentum to the liquidating movement.

Some traders said many mills apparently had filled their early requirements of raw cotton and were out of the market pending decisions on farm legislation in Washington and international developments.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Norment, Smith & Fuller Company, Inc., a corporation, 1427 Eye Street, N. W., Suite 1, plaintiff, vs. Edward Holliran, also known as Edward Holloran, et al., defendants. Civil Action No. 12600. Notice. To Edward Holliran, also known as Edward Holloran, if living, and to the unknown heirs, next of kin, devisees, legatees or assignees of said Edward Holliran, if he be dead; and to Mrs. Delia O'Halloran, 4315 A-E-Third Street or 2439½ E. Fifth Street, Long Beach, California, and Mrs. John A. Ritchie, 16th Street and Fillmore Avenue, Erie, Pennsylvania; and to all persons who claim of record an interest in the property hereinafter mentioned; and to all whom it may concern: Notice is hereby given you, as follows: On August 21, 1941, pursuant to the statute in such cases made and provided, Norment, Smith & Fuller Company, Inc., a corporation, filed a complaint in the above-entitled case alleging that Edward Holliran, also known as Edward Holloran, disappeared in the year 1908, that he was last heard from in 1908, and that he has not been seen or heard from since 1908; and asking for the appointment of a receiver to take possession of the real estate owned by said Edward Holliran in the District of Columbia and funds held for him by Norment, Smith & Fuller Company, Inc., and for disposition and distribution of same in accordance with law. On December 29, 1941, the Court appointed Frank S. Smith, 1427 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., receiver of the estate of said Edward Holliran, and he has taken possession of Lot 814, in Square North of 515, known as 410 New York Avenue, Northwest, and Lot 119, in Square 859, known as 715 Sixth Street, Northeast, in the District of Columbia, and of approximately $6,897.17, belonging to said Edward Holliran or his estate. On May 27, 1942, the Court entered an order referring the cause to me, the undersigned auditor "to determine who is entitled to the property of Edward Holliran, deceased, and authorize distribution, to state final account of Frank S. Smith, receiver in this cause, to recommend payment of all costs and expenses in this proceeding and compensation for the receiver. The auditor is authorized to publish notice of this hearing in one Pittsburgh newspaper, The Washington Post and Washington Law Reporter." Notice is also hereby given that I have fixed and appointed TUESDAY, August 4, 1942, at 1:30 o'clock, p. m., as the time, and the Auditor's Hearing Room in the United States District Courthouse, Washington, D. C., as the place, for a hearing to consider the rights and interests of all claimants, and to take testimony concerning all matters referred to me, and for all other acts and proceedings that may be necessary under the said order. Any and all inquiries concerning the estate of said Edward Holliran, or the proceedings in this cause, should be addressed to the receiver, Frank S. Smith, 1427 Eye Street N.W., Washington, D. C. A. LEFTWICH SINCLAIR, Auditor of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia. 9,16,23.

The Irving Berlins, the Eddie Dowlings and the George M. Cohans of World War II are going to be given the chance to present their stuff before a world-wide audience in the new C. B. S. series which makes its debut at Fort Belvoir tonight.

It's to be called "Cheers From the Camps" and its stars will all come from the armed services. You'll hear original music, dramatic skits, impersonations, novel quiz shows and what have you, with all the talent and all the writing supplied by the service men themselves as the series travels throughout the country from week to week, broadcasting from a different camp each time.

The show, presented in cooperation with the War Department and the USO under the sponsorship of the General Motors Corporation, will be in the form of a "radio letter" addressed to the folks back home and designed to tell the story of Army life as the boys in the service know it.

But it not only will be sent to the folks back home, throughout the United States, but will also be short-waved to the fighting forces overseas.

One of the features of tonight's performance from Fort Belvoir will be the recitation of a letter home by Private Wallace Smith of Melrose, Ill., in which he will report to all parents, wives and sweethearts on Army life. Another highlight will be a quiz in which a team of privates will compete against a group of noncommissioned officers, with rewards falling about where they may.

"Cheers From the Camps" will be heard over WJSV every Tuesday at 9:30 p. m.

The Post Radio Highlights

10:30 a. m., WINX—This country needs nurses! Sylvia Milrod interviews Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Supreme Court Chief Justice Stone, and who is herself on the Board of Instructive Visiting Nurses.

4 p. m., WOL—Bryan Field describes the feature at Aqueduct, the Mad Play Handicap.

7:30 p. m., WRC—There will be a salt tang to the script and a nautical flavor to the nonsense on the Burns and Allen program, for George and Gracie and the rest of the company will travel to the Naval Training station at San Diego for their broadcast.

9 p. m., WMAL—"Famous Jury Trials" presents the "Poker Swindle Case" the story of Sam Parkes who lost his life's savings in a poker game with political workers.

9 p. m., WJSV—Archie is feverishly trying to improve the social status of "Duffy's Tavern" which explains why he invites a gentleman of the press down to the joint to partake of the "cousin" and also try some of the food.

9:30 p. m., WMAL—"This Nation at War." Behind-the scene-reports of the contribution being made by the American people toward the war effort will be picked up from key defense centers including St. Paul, Minn., presenting students of the Mechanic Arts High School.

9:30 p. m., WJSV—"Cheers From the Camps," a new and thrilling sort of radio program that presents former professional entertainers in the armed forces in a series of morale-building broadcasts for the folks back home, makes its debut over 114 network stations.

DIXIE DUGAN — All Yours — BY J. P. McEVOY and H. J. STRIEBEL

HOW WOULD YOU AND YOUR FAMILY LIKE TO LIVE ON A HIGH SCALE, FOR PRACTICALLY NOTHING, FOR THE DURATION?
I DON'T GET IT ???
YOU WILL IF YOU WANT IT!— TURN HERE!
THERE IT IS! IT'S ALL YOURS, FOR THE ASKING!
IT'S A HIGH SCALE AS FAR AS LOCATION IS CONCERNED— BUT I STILL DON'T GET IT —WHAT DO I HAVE TO DO?
IS THERE A CATCH TO IT?

At Your Office . . . or at Ease . . . Here's Your Wardrobe in the Washington Manner

Whether you're "On Duty" at your business or "Off Duty" at your leisure you'll find Solid Comfort in your summer clothes from The Hecht Co.'s Modern Man's Store. You know, Washington's summer climate at its best is a villainous thing. When it gets hot it gets sticky . . . and when it gets sticky you feel as if you've been thru the clothes wringer. So what to do about it? We can't change the weather but we've done the next best thing. That is, to clothe you coolly and comfortably in solid comfort that will help to combat the heat when it reaches 97 degrees. The items on this page are what well dressed Washingtonians will wear for "On Duty" or "Off Duty." Men's Sportswear and Furnishings—Main Floor; Clothing—Second Floor.
